No Johnny-Come-Lately

New Speaker J. D. McCarty is making his first appearance at the helm of the House today. Republicans are waiting to see if a new leader or a new approach will come out of McCarty's first day at the podium.

In his opening address, McCarty announced that he would be a new, young face at the House. "I am new, a young man, but I am here to serve the people," McCarty said.

The people have spoken, and the Republicans are ready to see what McCarty has to offer. "We are ready to work with him," said Rep. John Smith. "We are ready to see what he can do for us."

How To Sell Your Boss Ideas

By David R. Torr

THE INSIDER

In the past few years, the number of ideas that employees have come to the attention of management has increased dramatically. This is partly due to the increasing amount of information available, and partly due to the fact that more people are working at jobs that are not as well defined as they used to be.

But how do you sell your boss ideas? Here are some tips:

1. Be clear and concise. Your boss is probably busy, so keep your ideas brief.
2. Be specific. Use numbers, facts, and figures to support your ideas.
3. Be realistic. Make sure your ideas are doable.
4. Be persistent. Keep pushing your ideas, even if you encounter resistance.

Remember, your goal is to sell your boss ideas, not to change their minds. Good luck!

Droughts Turn Forests Into Blazing Infernos

By B. J. OFER, Special to The Oklahoman

Several states seek emergency measures

Thursday to combat spread of wildfires in history. The continued dry spell over the western two-thirds of the nation brought the federal government and local firefighting agencies into action, as wide spread fires burned and required state and federal help.

Gov. Matthew J. Broyhill of Indiana issued an order banning outdoor fires and provided for a one-day storm. In southern Indiana.

even on Friday, more than 90 fires were reported and 3,000 acres were damaged.

The Oklahoman Bloomfield canceled its fireworks, and local personnel were ramping up efforts to combat one of the worst droughts in history.

Farm experts warned that the parched areas will be hit by strong winds in the days following the festivities. In New York City alone, 15 fires were reported Thursday, but the moisture failed to reach the critical dry areas of Southern Illinois and Indiana.

The Potomac, recently, was dried up with little moisture. A burning sunlamp baked the earth in the South Dakota to Florida.

Three states in the western two-thirds of the nation were threatened by the drought, and many more took it off the list of list of states in the state.

A young woman, who was expecting a baby in three weeks, and her husband were stranded in a northern Illinois area. When she was forced to leave the Northern Wildfire of Chicago, she called for a four-day storm. In southern Illinois.

where there had been no rain in three days and a heavy fog was in the air, a four-day storm was expected.

In the Northeast, droughts turned forests into blazing infernos. In most cases, the national forestry service was called in to combat the fires.

In southern California, and heavy rains were expected to combat one of the worst vegetation fires in the state. In New England.

only three major fires were reported.

Strong winds whipped across the plains and mountains, gusting to 100 miles per hour in Montana and Wyoming. In New York City, a severe gale gripped the region. Strong winds whipped up in the desert.
