WASHINGTON -- President Johnson says he has seen problems with the White House's famous patronage system. "It's time to clean it up," he said. But Johnson also admitted that the system is not perfect and that changes need to be made. Johnson plans to introduce legislation to reform the system, which he says is "too powerful." The legislation is expected to be introduced in January.

The proposed legislation would cap the number of political appointees in the executive branch at 500 and require all political appointees to pass a background check. The legislation would also require the White House to disclose the names of all political appointees and their appointing agencies.

Johnson said he has already made changes to the White House's system. "I've stopped using the system," he said. "I'm not going to use it again." Johnson also said he has asked his aides to be more careful in their use of the system.

In a statement, White House Press Secretary David tame said Johnson is "committed to improving the system. He has already taken steps to improve it, and he will continue to work to make it better."

War Needs To Be Ended

We believe that our country should immediately begin preparations for a world-wide peacekeeping force. This force should be comprised of members from all nations and would be charged with the responsibility of maintaining peace and security in the world.

It is universally acknowledged that the United States is the most powerful nation in the world. It is also obvious that the United States has the ability to make a significant contribution to world peace.

However, there are those who argue against the establishment of a world-wide peacekeeping force. They argue that it would be too costly and that it would not be effective in maintaining peace.

We believe that these arguments are unfounded. The cost of maintaining a world-wide peacekeeping force would be insignificant compared to the benefits it would provide. And we believe that it is possible to establish an effective peacekeeping force.

Let us not delay any longer. It is time for the United States to take the lead in the effort to establish a world-wide peacekeeping force.

KOMA
ALWAYS A WINNER
CONGRATULATES
THREE OTHER WINNERS

We made a small study of these people and now we can say it. They don't have a lot in common. Not surprising that they don't. It doesn't take special skill to win KOMA's fabulous prizes. And when we say fabulous... KOMA and the Humpty Dumpty Supermarkets teamed up a while back on a contest to see if we could find a way to give away free groceries to 100 winners. We chose the winners by selecting the first 100 people to answer the question on the official Biscuit Hockey Handbook, also free at Humpty's. Since everybody eats, free groceries are just the free-response-get-the-question-off-the-KOMA-air-and-leap-the-answer-in-the-back-from-Humpty's. For you that we have three winners, our contest hasn't really ended yet. But it's quieter. Sure, the Humpty Dumpty folks want you to go into their stores. And you want to listen to KOMA. But isn't a thousand dollars in groceries worth a little less going and listening?
