Powell May Finally Pay

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal government, under pressure from the late Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan, is considering a plan to pay off the $10 billion debt owed by the federal government to the city of New York.

The plan, which is being considered by the Treasury Department, would involve the federal government paying off the debt in installments over a period of several years.

The debt is owed to the city of New York as a result of the city's failure to pay its share of the cost of building the World Trade Center.

The city owes the federal government approximately $10.5 billion for the construction of the World Trade Center, which was completed in 1973.

The city had been planning to pay off the debt over a period of several years, but the federal government has been reluctant to accept the city's offer of payment.

It's a bigger bargain today than ever before.

Your telephone gives you more for your money today than at any time since I was born. It's from a smaller investment than ever before. The telephone is a product of mass production, not of mass production. It is the only way to get the best value for your money today. You can get a telephone for less than 10 dollars, and it will last longer than the telephone you bought 50 years ago. On the average, there are about as many telephones in each of your Oklahoma homes today as there were 50 years ago. But the average today is much higher, and the telephone line you bought 50 years ago will not last as long. They have been getting better, and the cost of doing so is reflected in the price. They have been getting better, and the cost of doing so is reflected in the price. They have been getting better, and the cost of doing so is reflected in the price.

Another thing. The quality of your telephone has never been better. Today's telephone is faster and clearer than the one you bought 50 years ago. It is a better combination.
