What's In Name? Don't Ask Steve Spray

By Jim Mercurio

At a recent meeting of the Oklahoma City Thunder, head coach Steve Spray was asked about his decision to name his team the "Thunder".

"I think it's a great name," Spray said. "It's powerful, it's fast, it's energetic. "Thunder" is a word that conveys a lot of different things. It's powerful, it's loud, it's something that can be felt. It's something that can be heard.

"I chose it because I want our team to be like that. I want them to play with that kind of energy, that kind of intensity. I want them to be a force to be reckoned with. "Thunder" is the perfect name for that.

"Of course, there are other names that could have been considered. "Lightning" might have been a good choice, or "Thunderbirds". But in the end, "Thunder" was the name that stuck. I hope our fans enjoy it as much as we do.

"And let's not forget, the Thunder is also a bird. So we've got a connection there too. It's a name that has meaning, a name that people can get behind.

"I think it's a great name. And I'm looking forward to seeing how our team performs with it."

The 89ers, a new team in the NBA, are expected to have a strong season. Spray said he's looking forward to getting his team ready for the upcoming season.

"We're excited to have our first practice," Spray said. "We've got a lot of talent on this team, and I'm looking forward to seeing how they perform."

"I think our guys are ready to go. They've been working hard in the off-season, and I'm confident they'll come to camp ready to play."

"We're going to have a tough schedule, but I think our guys are up for the challenge. We'll see how it goes."

"We're excited to have the turkeys back," said zoo director John Smith. "They're a popular attraction for our visitors, and we're looking forward to seeing how they do in the Thanksgiving exhibit."

"We've got a lot of turkeys this year, so we're hoping for a big turnout."
