Is There A Judge In The House?

It's Best To Time Your Misdemeanors

By Paul Bekett

The Oklahoma Journal

If you have never been caught in a misdemeanor frame of mind, chances are you wouldn't be the first to call yourself a judge. In the office, in the shop or on the road, what you do in your daily life matters to the people you pass by with your favorite beer.

The attorney general of a small Oklahoma town, known for his ability to stay away from the law, was recently quoted as saying, "I'm not a judge. I'm a citizen." But he isperiencing life and making his own rules.

When the police officer arrived at a local bar, the attorney general was sitting at a table with friends, drinking beer and eating burgers. The officer asked for the attorney general's ID, and instead of showing it, he said, "I'm not a judge. I'm a citizen." The officer, taken aback, responded, "You can't do that here!" and the attorney general replied, "Yes, I can. I'm a citizen." The officer explained that the attorney general was in violation of the law, and the attorney general responded, "That might be true, but I'm a citizen first and a judge last." The officer then arrested the attorney general and took him to jail.

Remedial Plan Set In Tatum

A top political issue in the state of Oklahoma is the remedial education plan set in Tatum. The plan is designed to help students who are struggling in school, and it has been met with mixed reactions from the community.

The Tatum School Board has been working on the remedial education plan for several months, and they have received a lot of feedback from the community. Some parents have expressed concerns about the plan, while others have praised it for its potential to help struggling students.

"It's a step in the right direction," said one parent. "I'm glad they're doing something about our kids' education."

"I don't see how this can help," said another parent. "The schools are already doing everything they can, and this won't help our kids get ahead."

The plan includes tutoring programs, after-school programs, and additional resources for students who need extra help. The school board is hoping that the plan will help improve student outcomes and reduce the need for remedial education in the future.

Bloodiest Battles Of Year Reported

Washington (AP) — American soldiers in South Korea reported Monday that the bloodiest battles of the year occurred in two separate battles described as the Second Pacific War and the Korean War. The Japanese were down to their last 20,000 men in the battle for Okinawa.

The fighting continued on the Central Highlands and in the city of Seoul, and U.S. forces were advancing on the North Korean capital. The battle for Okinawa was the bloodiest battle of the year, with an estimated 20,000 men killed.

The military said the battle for Okinawa was the bloodiest battle of the year, with an estimated 20,000 men killed. The Japanese were down to their last 20,000 men in the battle for Okinawa.

"The battle was intense," said a military spokesman. "We lost over 1,000 men in the battle, and we had to retreat to avoid being overrun by the Japanese."

OSU Prof Makes Gains In Study Of Plant Cells

In a recent study, Professor John Doe of Oregon State University has made significant gains in understanding the photosynthesis process in plant cells. The research, published in the Journal of Botany, suggests a new mechanism by which plants convert sunlight into energy.

The study involved a detailed analysis of the chloroplasts, the organelles responsible for photosynthesis, in various plant species. Professor Doe and his team developed a novel technique using advanced microscopy and spectroscopy to observe the dynamic changes in chloroplast structure and function under different environmental conditions.

"This breakthrough will have profound implications for our understanding of plant biology," said Professor Doe. "It opens up new avenues for developing more efficient plant-based energy systems."
Women’s Arteries Harden, Study Shows

The "fear of getting old," often called coronary artery disease, is a major health problem in the United States. According to a new study, the disease can be traced back to the early years of life. Researchers at the University of Michigan have found that the arteries begin to harden in young adulthood, even before heart disease symptoms appear.

The study, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, analyzed data from nearly 10,000 adults who were part of the Framingham Heart Study. The participants were aged 20-80 at the start of the study, and their arteries were evaluated every five years.

The researchers found that the arteries of participants aged 30-39 years were already beginning to harden, even though they had not yet developed heart disease symptoms. The degree of artery hardening increased with age, and the risk of heart disease increased with the degree of artery hardening.

"These findings suggest that heart disease begins much earlier in life than we previously thought," said lead author Dr. John Kannel, a cardiologist at the University of Michigan. "We need to focus on preventive strategies that begin in early adulthood to reduce the risk of heart disease later in life."

The study also found that factors such as smoking, high blood pressure, and high cholesterol levels were associated with increased artery hardening.

The researchers recommend that people start taking preventative measures against heart disease in their 20s and continue throughout their lives. This includes maintaining a healthy lifestyle, eating a balanced diet, exercising regularly, and avoiding smoking and excessive alcohol consumption.

"We need to educate people about the importance of heart health in early adulthood," said Kannel.

The study has implications for public health policy and the prevention of heart disease, which is the leading cause of death in the United States.

"These findings suggest that we need to start thinking about heart disease prevention in young adulthood," said Kannel. "We need to develop strategies that will encourage people to adopt healthy lifestyles and prevent the hardening of arteries before it becomes irreversible."

The study was funded by the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute, part of the National Institutes of Health.

Funds Needed For Proposed Oil Museum Drawings

By ANDREW C. HALL

The Oklahoma City Museum of Art, which is in the process of planning an expansion and renovation, is seeking funds to finance the construction of a new building.

The museum, located in downtown Oklahoma City, is one of the state's premier cultural institutions. It houses a collection of art from around the world, including works by renowned artists such as Picasso, Dali, and Klimt.

The museum's current facility was built in the 1960s and has become increasingly overcrowded with the growth of its collection and the number of visitors it attracts. The expansion will allow the museum to accommodate more visitors and exhibits, and to better preserve and display its art.

The new building will be constructed on the museum's existing site, and will feature state-of-the-art exhibits, galleries, and educational programs. It will also include a café and gift shop.

The museum is currently seeking donations from individuals, organizations, and corporations to help finance the construction. Anyone interested in supporting the museum's expansion can contact the museum's development department at (405) 235-8600.

At Central State

23 Courses Added

Central State University has added 23 new courses to its curriculum, effective for the fall semester. The courses are designed to meet the needs of the university's diverse student body and to provide a broader range of educational opportunities.

The new courses include courses in fields such as economics, computer science, and psychology. They are intended to complement the university's existing courses and to provide students with a more comprehensive education.

The university has also made changes to its existing courses, including updates to course content and the addition of new materials. These changes are intended to improve the quality of education and to keep the university's curriculum up-to-date.

At the university's fall convocation, President John Smith announced the addition of the new courses and praised the efforts of the faculty and staff in making the changes. "These changes are a testament to the dedication and hard work of our faculty and staff," he said. "We are committed to providing our students with the best possible education, and these changes will help us achieve that goal."

City OIC Self-Help Center Plans Dedication Ceremony

By ROGER COHEN

The Center Building was the site of a dedication ceremony for the City OIC Self-Help Center on February 16th. The Center, located at 123 Main Street, will provide a space for community members to come together and work on various projects. The dedication ceremony was attended by many local officials and community leaders, including Mayor Johnson and City Council members. The Center will offer a range of programs and services, including job training, education, and health services. The ceremony was a great success and was well attended, with many people expressing their support for the Center and its mission. The Center is scheduled to open in March, and will be available to all members of the community.

Teens Plan March Week In Mexico

Spanish students plan to March for various causes this week. The students, all at a high school in Mexico City, will stage a series of protests to demand better educational opportunities and fair treatment from the government. They will march to the heart of the city's government center, calling for reforms to improve the education system and ensure equal opportunities for all students. The students have been preparing for weeks to make their voices heard, and the March is expected to draw a large crowd. The organizers hope to draw attention to the issues facing their country and inspire change. More details will be available soon.

Women’s Arteries Harden, Study Shows

The “dry martyr” of atherosclerosis, the woman, is facing a new problem in the narrowing of her arteries, aortoarteriosclerosis, that is affecting her in a way her male counterpart has not been affected before.

With atherosclerosis, cholesterol plaques build up in the arterial walls and cause the arteries to narrow. This reduces blood flow to organs, leading to heart attacks and strokes. The plaques can also rupture, leading to clots and further complications.

A recent study has shown that the woman is more susceptible to this condition than her male counterpart, particularly in the abdominal aorta and the iliac arteries.

The study, conducted by a team of researchers from the University of California, San Francisco, and Stanford University, looked at data from more than 200,000 adults and found that women had a higher risk of aortoarteriosclerosis than men.

The researchers believe that this is due to a combination of hormonal factors and lifestyle choices. Estrogen, a hormone that is naturally produced in women, can affect the arteries and contribute to the development of atherosclerosis.

On the other hand, men are more likely to engage in behaviors that increase their risk of atherosclerosis, such as smoking, high blood pressure, and high cholesterol levels.

The study suggests that women should be more proactive in managing their cholesterol levels and blood pressure, and should consider regular exercise and a healthy diet to reduce their risk of aortoarteriosclerosis.

The researchers also recommend that medical professionals should be aware of the increased risk of aortoarteriosclerosis in women, and should consider these factors when evaluating and treating patients.

Strong Move Afoot To Shorten Vote Ballot

By MIKE CASEY

The Oklahoma Senate and House of Representatives will consider legislation this session that would shorten the length of time between the filing of the state primary ballot and the scheduling of the state primary election.

The legislation, which has been introduced by Senator Tom Cole and Representative Tom Cole, would allow the primary ballot to be filed with the state Board of Election Commissioners on the first Tuesday in March, instead of the first Tuesday in May as is currently the case.

Cole said the shorter filing period would make the election process more efficient and less expensive.

"It will reduce the number of ballots that have to be printed and mailed," Cole said. "And it will allow us to get the elections over with faster, which is good for everyone."
