Flash Flood Sweeps Baton Rouge

Tornadoes Pop Corn Belt

In New Orleans
A violent storm system that threatened the central Midwest with the heaviest snowfall in a decade swept over the central Plain States and caused the worst flood ever at Baton Rouge, La., last week. The flood washed through the city in 48 hours. The rain fell in such a manner that the soil could not absorb it, and the water then ran off in sheets of water. The city was flooded as fast as it could be drained.

The storm swept away four homes and damaged many others. It also caused a number of injuries and one death.

The water rose to a level of 15 feet above the normal. The streets were closed, and the levee was washed away. The levee was repaired, and the water receded to a level of 4 feet above the normal.

The storm caused a great deal of damage, and the cleanup work will take many weeks.
