"I Don't Want Mother To Worry"

Girl Faces Open-Heart Surgery Alone

By JOHN WATKINS

A 4 year old mother from Enid was turned over the surgical suite of the Oklahoma Heart Center on Saturday morning for a procedure to correct her congenital heart disease.

The procedure, known as a "Fontan procedure," is a complex operation that involves rerouting the blood flow in the heart to improve oxygenation. It is typically performed in infants with certain types of congenital heart defects.

The child was accompanied by her mother, who was visibly emotional as they prepared for the surgery. The mother was encouraged by the medical staff and was given a detailed explanation of the procedure.

The Fontan procedure is a major surgery that requires a team of cardiac surgeons, nurses, and other specialists. The child's heart will be monitored closely during and after the surgery to ensure proper function.

The child and her mother will be kept in the hospital for several days after the surgery, during which time they will be monitored closely. The child will be evaluated by the medical team before being discharged.

The success rate of the Fontan procedure is high, with most children going on to live healthy lives. However, some children may require additional surgeries or medications to manage any complications.

The child's mother has been supportive throughout the process and has expressed gratitude to the medical staff. The family is looking forward to the child's recovery and is grateful for the care they have received.

Rate Hikes 'Untainted,' Says Tulsa

The president of Oklahoma Natural Gas, Inc. denied allegations that his company was involved in any activity that could be perceived as a conflict of interest. The company has been under scrutiny for recent rate hikes.

The president stated that the rate increases were necessary to cover the costs of maintaining and upgrading the company's infrastructure. The company has been faced with rising costs due to increased demand and necessary upgrades.

The president also denied any involvement in the decision-making process, stating that the company follows all necessary procedures and guidelines to ensure fair and just rates.

Some residents and consumer groups have criticized the rate hikes, arguing that they were unnecessarily high and unjustified. The company has faced public scrutiny and pressure to explain the basis for the increases.

Officer's Tough Job

Child Abuse Hard To Uncover, Stop

In PAUL MEN

Like the good hearted people who serve on the police force, Officer Henry gave up the "screwing around" to prevent major problems in the community. Officer Henry is a member of the police department.

They don't have to be told it's the right thing to do. They do it in order to save as many children as possible. Officer Henry is a good example of what a police officer should be.

As for the people who abuse children, they should be held accountable for their actions. This is a tough and sometimes dangerous job.

We should all be grateful for the work that police officers do, especially in the face of such a difficult subject as child abuse. Officer Henry and his colleagues are heroes in this fight.

OSU 'No Confidence' Vote Asked

A vote of no confidence in the administration of Oklahoma State University is being considered by the university's faculty. The vote is in response to concerns about the administration's handling of a recent controversy.

The controversy involved a decision by the administration to cut funding for a program. The faculty is concerned about the administration's decision-making process and the potential impact on student services.

The administration has acknowledged the concerns and has assured the faculty that they will review their decision-making process. However, the faculty remains concerned and has requested a vote of no confidence.

The vote will be held in the near future, and the faculty is expected to make a decision based on the results. This is a serious matter, and the faculty is taking it very seriously.

A Review

Script Hinders Superb Casting

It's hard to believe. You can't remember how many years it has been since the last Oklahoma City production of "Peyrot, the Mercenary." The production, as usual, was superb. The acting was good, the sets were beautiful, and the music was wonderful. But the script...well, it was a disaster. The dialogue was stilted, the characters were one-dimensional, and the plot was weak. It was a shame, because the talent was there. The only thing that saved the show was the cast. The actors were excellent, but they couldn't carry the burden of the awful script. It was a shame, because the potential was there. But it was not to be. The script was a hindrance to the excellent talent that was present. It was a shame, but it was true. The script was a hindrance to the excellent talent that was present. It was a shame, but it was true.

"I've Built A Better Mousetrap"

The authors of the Oklahoma Times Guide to Oklahoma, with an odd name like "I've Built A Better Mousetrap," are promoting their new book. The book appears to be a practical guide on building mousetraps, possibly offering tips and techniques for creating effective traps. The cover features a picture of a mousetrap, which suggests a hands-on approach to the subject. The authors may be experienced in cage trapping, a method of capturing wildlife using traps designed to capture animals without causing harm. The book could be a valuable resource for those interested in wildlife management, pest control, or outdoor activities.

LBJ Overrules Generals On Troop Strength In Germany

Washington, D.C. - President Lyndon B. Johnson overruled his military commanders on Tuesday, announcing that he would cut the U.S. troop strength in Germany by 25,000 soldiers.

The President said that the reduction was necessary to reflect the changing military situation in Europe.

"The President acted in the best interests of the nation," said Defense Secretary Robert McNamara.

Sergeant Ends Thirty Years Of Caring For Army Animals

The serving of a dog as a soldier in the U.S. Army for 30 years without a single day's illness or accident is a record that probably will be difficult to equal. The dog, identified as Spots, was a member of the 44th Infantry Division in France during World War II. After the war, Spots was given to the U.S. Army Veterinary Research Laboratories at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland, where he served until his retirement. Spots was chosen for his exceptional behavior and was a constant source of inspiration to the soldiers who served with him.

Trend Toward Grouping Of Children

In the winter, the greater enrollment of children in Oklahoma City public schools means that the number of children who are eligible for the free lunch program will increase. The school district has already begun planning for the coming year, which will include the expansion of the program to accommodate the larger number of children.

The program, which is supported by the Oklahoma Association of Teachers, provides meals for children who are eligible based on income level. The program is designed to help children who are at risk of not receiving proper nutrition.
