Student Deferment Urges Optimistic

WASHINGTON (AP) - House backers of proposed student deferment bill decried the Senate Friday for failing to act against the President's threat of a veto on the measure, which the House passed last week.

In a joint statement, Senate Minority Leader Hubert Humphrey and Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield said they would keep fighting to get the bill enacted. They added that the Senate should consider changing the wording of the bill to avoid the President's threat.

The measure would exempt students from military service if they are majoring in non-defense related fields. The House, 356-53, voted to override the President's veto.

But the Senate failed to follow the House's lead and act on the bill, causing concern among supporters that the bill may not pass this session of Congress.

President Johnson has threatened to veto the bill if it reaches his desk.

Humphrey and Mansfield urged Congress to pass the bill and override the President's veto. They said the Senate would consider changing the bill to avoid the President's threat.

The Senate is scheduled to reconvene Tuesday. If the Senate acts on the bill, it is expected to pass.

Vatican Approves Sacrament Change

The Vatican moved toward a unified Catholic church by approving changes in the requirements for the sacrament of communion.

The move, which applies to both Latin and Eastern rite churches, is seen as a step toward resolving divisions among Catholics on the issue of communion.

The changes include an increase in the required age for receiving communion, from 18 to 21, and a requirement that only those who have been baptized can receive communion.

On the other hand, the move has been criticized by some who argue that it is a step backwards in terms of unity.

Bill Graham

My Answer

Now I Look Over the Hills to Texas with More Confidence Than Ever Before

And so it was with a sense of pride and accomplishment that I set out to see the country.

But then, Billy Graham

I stood there on the rooftop of a building in Dallas, Texas, and I looked out over the city. I could see the towers of downtown Dallas, the skyscrapers of downtown Fort Worth, and the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex.

And as I looked out over the city, I felt a sense of pride and accomplishment. I had come a long way, and I had accomplished a great deal.

And so I walked away from the rooftop, knowing that I had accomplished something special.
BARBER, STOCKTON LEAD

Have you ever been to a funeral home just to see what it's like inside?

We're inviting you to do exactly that. Hahn-Cook-Street & Draper's new building has just been completed at 6206 Northwest Grand Boulevard. Naturally, we're proud of our modern, functional design and beautiful, convenient location. We want you to see it. Our new building will be open to the public over the Memorial Day weekend. Come by, see our new surroundings. If any part of the funeral business is a mystery to you, ask us about it. You will leave with a new, deeper insight into our profession.
