He Was Big Enough To Die

'Slight' Marine Slain In Combat

Charles E. Thomas, whose 10-man platoon was killed in a "manner of combat," was among those killed in the ambush.

The Defense Department announced Monday that the 29-year-old Marine, a native of Abilene, Texas, was killed in the head. A radio operator, he had been hit by a bullet in the back.

"Our thoughts go out to the family," said the Defense Department.

The Marine was a native of Abilene, Texas. He had served in the Marine Corps for three years.

Later, another Marine announced that the 30-year-old Marine was killed in the ambush.

The Marine Corps announced on Tuesday that it had recommended the discharge of a 29-year-old Marine, a native of Abilene, Texas, who had been killed in a "manner of combat." The Marine was hit by a bullet in the head and killed in the ambush.

The high court ruled that the Marine's death was caused by an "unknown person or persons." The Marine Corps said it was investigating the circumstances of the death.
