CREWMAN DIES IN B-58 CRASH

By HUGH MORGEN

CARE FREE - A 30-year-old airman died in a B-58 crash near the base where he was stationed, the Department of Defense announced today.

The plane was on a training mission near the base when it crashed. The airman, identified as 2nd Lt. John Smith, was the pilot of the aircraft.

The plane was an F-122C, one of the new jet fighters being tested at the base.

An investigation is underway to determine the cause of the accident.

The Department of Defense said it would release the names of the other crew members as soon as they could be identified.

The crash occurred near the base's northwest corner. Smith was a experienced pilot with more than 1,000 hours of flight time. He was married and had two children.

Smith was a native of Chicago and had been stationed at the base for two years.

The crash occurred at about 11 a.m. local time.

The Department of Defense said it would conduct a full investigation to determine the cause of the crash.

The F-122C is a supersonic jet designed for intercepting and destroying enemy aircraft.

Cattle Industry Beset By Woes In Infancy

The cattle industry was beset by a number of problems in the 1960s, including overproduction and a drop in prices. Despite efforts to address these issues, the industry struggled to recover. In 1967, the Oklahoma Department of Agriculture received 1860 reports of cattle rearing and 1477 reports of cattle exchange. These numbers were down from 1966, when there were 1936 reports of cattle rearing and 1679 reports of cattle exchange. The drop in numbers was due to a number of factors, including the end of the Korean War, which had caused a surge in demand for cattle. The drop in prices was due to a number of factors, including the end of the Korean War, which had caused a surge in demand for cattle.

Cattle Industry Beset By Woes In Infancy

The cattle industry faces a multitude of challenges that threaten its future. In the early stages, the industry has encountered various setbacks, including fluctuating markets and uncertain demand. Some of the challenges have been due to the global pandemic, which has disrupted supply chains and markets worldwide. Others are more structural, such as the ongoing trade disputes and the increasing costs of feed and other inputs.

Despite these challenges, the cattle industry remains resilient. Producers are adapting to new market conditions and investing in technologies to improve efficiency. The industry is also working to promote its products and increase consumer awareness of the benefits of sustainably sourced meat.

In the face of these challenges, the cattle industry is adapting and innovating to ensure its continued success.
