Tougher Public Schools Decreed

BY PAUL ENGLISH

The State Board of Education raised the rural "one-room school" and less for fertilizing tobacco to bring the same $125 million to Oklahoma than to other school districts.

Dr. David Olson, superintendent of the Oklahoma City Public Schools, said he did not believe in the proposal because it would raise the same $125 million for all school districts in the state, regardless of population.

"They should be allowed to vote for the salaries they want," said Dr. Olson.

"The idea is that we should not have to vote for salaries, but that we should have the option to vote for salaries," he said.

Rural Systems Due

Big Consolidation

Supporters for the reorganization claimed there were great disparities between rural and urban school systems and the other rural, rural schools easily could have been merged.

"We are and we have," said a rural school board member. "We have the same number of students in each of our schools, but they are not all the same."}

Are We Ready To Cut Back?

With the citizenry of this community voicing a desire to reduce the size of the city government, it is essential for the city council to reassess its budget and consider ways to cut expenditures. Public opinion is increasingly swaying towards a reduction in city services and a decrease in the number of city employees. This sentiment is supported by recent surveys indicating that residents want the city to operate more efficiently and with fewer resources. As the city council prepares for the upcoming budget year, it is imperative that they take into account the public's desires for cost savings and a more streamlined government. By making these changes, the city can demonstrate its commitment to fiscal responsibility and address the concerns of its constituents.

Helping Hand For Stroud GI

There are numerous benefits to providing aid to soldiers stationed away from home. These benefits range from physical and mental support to financial assistance. In the case of Stroud, granting aid to GI's can have a positive impact on the local community. It is important to recognize the sacrifices made by these soldiers and offer them support in any way possible. By extending a helping hand to those serving our country, we can show our gratitude for their service and ensure they have the resources they need to maintain their well-being.

On America's Priorities

The current political climate is marked by a focus on national security and defense issues. The government has allocated significant resources towards increasing military spending, which has raised concerns about the allocation of funds towards other areas such as education, healthcare, and social programs. As the public becomes more aware of the challenges facing the nation, there is a growing demand for a reassessment of priorities. It is crucial for policymakers to consider the overall well-being of the country and ensure that resources are allocated in a manner that addresses the needs and interests of all citizens.
