Full Probe Demanded
National Crisis, GOP Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican leaders called on city暴风 raging a national crisis. Mayor Tom Davis met with seven members of Congress and other top party officials yesterday for talks that are likely to result in a more united and stronger response.

"We are all united in our desire to protect our citizens and our city from further harm," Davis said. "But we must also be realistic about the challenges we face."

The meeting comes as the nation grapples with the aftermath of a series of mass shootings that have left more than 30 people dead and hundreds injured. The latest attack occurred in a crowded shopping mall in Las Vegas, Nevada.

The GOP leaders said they would demand a full investigation of the attack and called for a stronger federal response to gun violence. They also called for increased funding for mental health services and for stricter background checks on gun purchases.

Democrats, who have long called for more comprehensive gun control laws, said they welcomed the GOP's support for stronger laws.

Ex-Con Needs Other Aid

Bus Ticket, $5 Not Enough

By J.O. FELLERS JR.

When the parolee is released, he is given a $5 bus ticket and a job in a supermarket.

"That's not enough," said one of the parolees, who was released last month.

The parolee has been living on the streets for the past year and has no other means of transportation.

"I need more help," he said. "I need to get a job and a place to live."

The parolee is one of many who have been released from prison in recent years but are struggling to find work and housing.

Other parolees have been given $100, $200 or $500 to help them get back on their feet. But the parolee said he needed more.

"I need more than just a bus ticket," he said.

The parolee, who has a history of criminal behavior, said he was ready to turn his life around if he could get the help he needs.

"I want to be a productive member of society," he said. "I don't want to go back to prison."
