No Cash For Guard, Rogers Says

By JUNE CARTER

Secretary of State Bob Rogers said Monday there is insufficient money in the state emergency fund to pay for federal troops to guard Oklahoma. The governor said the Guard is too expensive to hire.

"The governor isn't going to get anywhere with his request," Rogers said. "We need a state emergency fund to pay for the Guard to do the job.

Rogers said the Guard should be used to keep others from getting into the state, not to keep out others from going out. The Guard should not be used to protect the state, but to protect the people within the state.

The governor has requested $500,000 from the state's emergency fund to pay for the Guard, but Rogers said he would only consider that amount if it was enough to pay for the Guard for a full year.

"It's a matter of human lives and property protection, not state emergency funds," Rogers said.

During the past campaign, there were criticisms of Rogers for his fiscal responsibilities. Rogers said the state was in a better financial position than it was in the past.

English Government Shaken Up

Five Ministers Fired by 'Wilson'

By MANDLER MACKENZIE

The British government was in a state of flux Monday night when four ministers were fired by Prime Minister David 'Wilson'. The ministers were:

- James Callaghan, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs
- John Gilbert, Secretary of State for Overseas Trade
- Frank Hay, Secretary of State for Energy
- Michael Foot, Secretary of State for Education

The ministers resigned after a meeting with the prime minister, who then appointed new ministers to take their places.

Lloyd George - Prime Minister Harold Wilson fired the four ministers and announced his own resignation. He said he was not satisfied with the way the government was running and that he wanted to lead a new government with new ideas.

The resignations were the result of a vote of no confidence in the government and a loss of confidence in the prime minister's leadership within the Labour Party.

The new government will be sworn in on Tuesday and will be led by Wilson, who has been leader of the Labour Party since 1964.
