Sauces Just Hoax (Bleep)

London—Two young Ismaili missionaries contended Friday night that they had been fired on their church in a small village in the Punjab province of India. They claimed that they had been shot at by police officers who had been sent to the area to suppress a recent riot.

The missionaries, who had been working in the Punjab for several days, reported that they were attacked by a group of about 50 men armed with guns. They said they had been able to escape without injury.

But the government denied the missionaries' claims, saying that there had been no incident in the area.

The missionaries were later found safe in a nearby village.

The incident is the latest in a series of clashes between the Ismaili community and the government in the Punjab, where tensions have been running high.

Walk-Out Appears Probable

The health ministry has decided to go on strike later today in a bid to force the government to enforce the new labor laws.

The ministry has been on strike for several weeks in an attempt to force the government to respect the laws, which were passed last year.

The ministry has said that it is willing to negotiate with the government, but that it cannot continue working under the current conditions.

The ministry's strike is expected to last for several days.

Network Ambush Indians—Pow—Wow

The network and the Indian community are at loggerheads over the new labor laws.

The network, which is owned by the Indian government, has refused to implement the new laws, saying that they are too restrictive.

The network has also been accused of censoring Indian news and promoting Western content.

The Indian community, on the other hand, is calling for the network to implement the laws and give them a voice in the country's media.

Militants March On

A group of militants has announced plans to march on the capital city.

The group, which is a breakaway faction of the main militant organization, has been demanding the release of its leader, who is currently in prison.

The march is expected to draw a large crowd and could lead to further violence.

How Time Flies

The boys are growing up so fast. They are now in the fourth grade and seem to be growing taller every day.

Their teacher, Mrs. Johnson, has been keeping a close eye on them and is happy to see how much they have grown.

Mrs. Johnson has told them to continue working hard and to always strive to do their best.

The boys, in turn, have promised to do just that.

I Got It (Bleep)

The boys have been acting up a lot lately. They are always getting into trouble and seem to be out of control.

Their mother, Mrs. Johnson, is starting to worry about them.

She has told them that they need to shape up and start behaving properly.

The boys, however, seem to be ignoring her advice.

They are still acting up and giving her a lot of trouble.

The boys, in turn, have promised to do just that.
