Happiness Burns Up George’s Problems (and Cigars)

By Joan Cassidy

It’s a New York State of Mind, and I’m not talking about the blues. It’s a bright, upbeat, feel-good vibe that permeates the city.”

It’s the weekend, and everyone is out enjoying the outdoors. People are taking pictures with their phones, smiling and laughing. The street is crowded with people of all ages, some with their children, others with pets. It’s a lively scene.

George, a middle-aged man, is walking down the street. He’s wearing a red shirt and blue jeans. He’s talking to a woman who’s not facing the camera. She’s wearing a white shirt and black pants. They seem to be having a pleasant conversation.

George: “It’s great out here today. I just love the weather. It’s perfect for a walk like this.”

Woman: “I agree. It’s been so cold and dreary lately. It’s nice to have a break.”

George: “Yeah, and it’s even better with a good cigar.”

Woman: “A cigar? Where did you get one?”

George: “I picked it up down the street. It’s a great brand.”

Woman: “I’ll have to try it sometime.”

George: “You should. It’s really good.”

They continue walking, enjoying the day and each other’s company. The crowd around them disperses as they move further down the street.

George: “What do you think about the view from here?”

Woman: “It’s beautiful. I love the way the sunlight filters through the trees.”

George: “Yes, it’s really stunning. I think it’s one of the best places to be.”

Woman: “I agree. It’s definitely a great spot.”

They continue walking, talking, and enjoying their time together. The day ends as they reach their destination, happy and content with their day.
