Effective printing to start Sunday paper Nov. 19

Major Additions Planned, Publisher Bill Atkinson Announces

The Oklahoma Journal this month will add two important sections to its 69 year tradition of service to Oklahoma City and surrounding areas by adding a Sunday edition. The new section will feature a major addition to the newspaper's editorial content, providing readers with a more comprehensive and up-to-date view of local news and events.

Announcing the planned new section, Publisher Bill Atkinson said that the addition of the new Sunday edition is a response to the needs of our readers and the community at large. "We are committed to providing high-quality journalism and information to our readers, and the addition of a Sunday edition will allow us to continue to do so," he said.

The new section, which will be called "Sunday Edition," will feature a variety of content, including local news, sports, entertainment, and features. It will also include a special section highlighting community events and activities.

Atkinson added, "We are excited about the addition of the Sunday edition and believe it will provide our readers with a valuable resource for staying informed about what is happening in their community."

Rapist Let Off On Promise

Rapes have a capricious action and it is not proper to make promises when they are dealing with the law. It is a common practice to demand promises from men who have been convicted of raping women, and the promises are usually made on the condition that the rapist shall not be punished.

Let's Get Behind Rodeo Finals

In order to get anyone's best behind the Oklahoma City P.R.C. we are going to try to create a situation in which we can demand promises from people who have been convicted of raping women. This is a common practice and it is often made on the condition that the rapist shall not be punished.
