Baptist Leaders Back Cothen

OBU Chief’s Stand On Paper Supported

The Rev. J. M. Cothen, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Oklahoma City, warned on the occasion of his installation as an Oklahoma Baptist University professor that the university would have a difficult time if it continued on its present course.

"You don't have to be a genius to see that," Cothen said in an interview. "If we continue on this path, I believe we will be facing some serious problems in the future." Cothen's remarks were met with mixed reactions from the university administration.

"We appreciate Mr. Cothen's input," said Dr. John Smith, president of OBU. "We are committed to providing a quality education for our students, and we will continue to make any necessary changes to ensure that." Cothen's opening remarks are scheduled for 6 a.m. Thursday.

The announcement was made at a press conference on Thursday afternoon, which was attended by Cothen and several members of the university administration.

"I am looking forward to working with Dr. Smith and his team," Cothen said. "I believe we can work together to make a positive difference in the lives of our students." Cothen's installation as a professor is scheduled for October 1st.

Electric heating is becoming increasingly competitive in the home heating industry due to the downward trend of electric rates. During the past 30 years, OG&E has reduced the average residential electric rates over 50%—despite the greatly inflated price of nearly everything else in the family budget.

The economy of electricity plus the convenience, comfort, and cleanliness of total electric living has made "Cold-Medallion" Homes the most modern, financially-sound investment on the market today!
