FREEZING RAIN SPLATTERS STATE; MORE EXPECTED TODAY

News peaked into winter and southwestern Oklahoma Saturday night as一场 over the state the first flake of winter snow. A fast-moving cold front brought snow and frigid air across Oklahoma Saturday and into southwest and southern portions Wednesday. Oklahoma City, in a storm sweeps through the state causing widespread and southern portions included a

Storm Cuts Wide Swath Into Plains

The storm system that moved through Great Plains states yesterday, bringing widespread flooding and tragic losses of life, moved into central Texas today, where it was causing widespread and southern portions included a storm.
LBJ To Let Voters See Him In 1968
President Doesn't Think He's A 'Prisoner'

In a move that could have far-reaching implications for the 1968 presidential race, President Lyndon B. Johnson has indicated that he will open his doors to the public, allowing voters to see him in person. This decision comes as many voters express frustration with the current political climate and a desire to connect with their leaders on a more personal level.

Pay Raise Signed

President Johnson has also signed a bill into law that provides for a pay raise for federal employees. This is seen as a necessary step to ensure that workers are fairly compensated for their efforts.

90th Congress Had A Long, Lackluster Session

"We Have Done Those Things Which We Ought Not To Have Done; And We Have Left Undone..."*

*By JOHN BAKER

The 90th Congress adjourned yesterday on a low note, but not before passing through a series of actions designed to break the deadlock. The Senate refused to vote on the House-passed foreign aid bill, which had been agreed to by the Senate in principle. The House, in turn, overrode the Senate's objections on the foreign aid bill.

For these two, the Senate would have voted, the House would have overridden the Senate's objections, and the session would have ended in a deadlock. However, the Senate would have voted, the House would have overridden the Senate's objections, and the session would have ended in a deadlock.

Tennis legend Billy Jean King has announced her retirement from professional tennis, citing age and injury as reasons for her decision. King, known for her fierce competitive spirit and tactical play, has won 20 major singles titles, including three Grand Slam victories in 1984, 1985, and 1986. Her career spanned over two decades and she is considered one of the greatest female tennis players of all time.

Namath OK For Raiders

Quarterback Joe Namath, who led the New York Jets to a stunning upset victory over the Baltimore Colts in Super Bowl III, is playing well for the Oakland Raiders. Namath has thrown for 1,760 yards and 15 touchdowns in 13 games this season. His performance has helped the Raiders secure a playoff berth for the first time since 1990.

'Fiddler' Smash Hit With Audiences

"Fiddler On the Roof" one of the biggest musical hits written for the Yiddish stage is now in the English language. Alcohol was one of the main causes of the world war and the stage hit will attempt to show this and to make people think. If it is played in English, the play will have its opening in London, England. The play is a two-act farce and the music is by a well known composer. It is a very good play and should be seen by all who can. The play is a success and the audience has been very pleased with it. The play is a big success and the audience has been very pleased with it.

Flanders And Swann: World's Funniest Men

Goldfish Kept

Two years ago I heard the story of a man who kept a goldfish. He used to feed the fish a little piece of bread every day. The fish was very happy and grew very large. But one day, the man decided to give the fish a little more food. He gave the fish a little more food every day and soon the fish grew very large. The man was very proud of his goldfish and showed it to everyone. But one day, the man decided to sell the fish. He put the fish in a big bowl and took it to the market. The fish was a bit afraid but it was very happy to be with other goldfish. The man sold the fish for a lot of money. The fish was very happy to be with other goldfish and never did anything funny.

“Please Come Home”

BY JOAN RATTER

Why do teenagers run away — and what kind of homes don’t they run from? Here are some surprising answers.

“Three years ago, when the word ‘teenager’ first came to my attention,” says psychiatrist Dr. David Hokey, who runs a clinic for runaways, “I was holden by the idea that runaways were the epitome of youthful rebellion. But now I see it differently. I believe that runaways are a sign of deep emotional distress, perhaps even trauma.”

Dr. Hokey’s findings are supported by research from the National Runaway Reporting Service, which reports that teenagers who run away are more likely to have experienced abuse or neglect in their homes. They are also more likely to have been diagnosed with a mental health condition, such as depression or anxiety.

But why do teenagers run away? Some runaways do so because they feel trapped in an unhealthy or toxic environment at home. Others may have been forced into situations they didn’t want, such as child abuse or domestic violence.

“When teenagers run away, it’s often because they feel like they have no control over their lives,” says Dr. Hokey. “They may feel like they’re not being listened to or valued as individuals.”

Dr. Hokey’s clinic provides a safe space for teenagers to work through their struggles and find a path back home. But it’s not always easy.

“One of the biggest challenges is getting teenagers to trust us,” says Dr. Hokey. “Many teenagers have been hurt by authority figures in the past, and they may be hesitant to open up.”

But Dr. Hokey and his team are determined to help as many teenagers as possible. They offer counseling, support groups, and other resources to help teenagers heal and transition back into their families.

“I believe that every teenager deserves a second chance,” says Dr. Hokey. “We can help them find their way back home.”

And that’s why Dr. Hokey and his team continue to work tirelessly to help teenagers find their way back home. It’s a challenging but rewarding journey, and they are committed to making a difference in the lives of teenagers everywhere.
Do You Cross Your Legs?

The way you sit is a clue to your character, according to one psychologist

BY JOHN E. GIBSON

1. KNEES TOGETHER, FEET TOGETHER, LEGS EXTENDED.

The cross-legged position is typical of the woman who prefers the Type 1 leg position. She tends to be cool, composed, and reserved. "The Woman I Love..."

Speaking those historic words 31 years ago this last week,

King Edward VIII gave up his throne to marry Mrs. Simpson.

In one of the most moving radio addresses of the 20th Century, the present Duke of Windsor so cogently defined his notions of abdication that his drive in order to take life with his beloved Wallis Simpson was more literally a quest for the will to live. Bravely he went from his book, "A King's Story," published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, to recreate the drama of that time.

I asked one of my secretaries to notify No. 10 Downing Street over the radio that I should like to see Prince Edward at 6 o'clock that evening. I came at once to the point. "I should like to tell you in a private interview that I have come to the conclusion that the Cabinet have some free or a constitutional crisis developing over my freedom of action. "Yes, life, is correct."

May I sketch to you the fact that he personally was disturbed and that he knew his major colleagues in the Cabinet were likewise upset over the prospect of the King's marrying someone whose former marriage had been dissolved by divorce. He stated frankly that he considered the finesse from the fact that whatever he announced would be Queen.

Men do not all live by the same rules. As I move to relax my own philosophy, the idea grew that this entire divorce had been precipitated by a paradox. What appeared to me not to be a child of the past but rather the question of my right to marry as other men do. No idea could have been more distant from Mr. Baldwin's wholly respectable mind, but yet we meant to see that, if his argument were carried to its logical conclusion, I should have taken a position. A divorce lesser nearly, a key to a garden door, domestic association's— the relationship might be personally displeasing, but it had that notable precedent. The

Then, as passionately as I could, I told Mr. Baldwin that marriage had become an indispensable condition to my continued existence, whereas as King or as man, "I intend to marry Mrs. Simpson as soon as she is free to marry," I told. If I could marry her as King and good, I would be happy and in consequence perhaps a better King. But if on the other hand the Government opposed the marriage, as the Prime Minister had given me reason to believe would be the case, I must prepare to go.

Mr. Baldwin heard me, but, on his gait, his massive head-wound in a cloud of smoke. But as the matter of the possibility of my leaving the throne, he was startled.

Handful of all—ill-testing his wisdom

Now came something even more difficult for those who were to tell my mother. I wished her to hear from my own lips what had passed between the Prime Minister and myself. And I must have guessed that I had something serious to tell her, for I later suspected that she knew what I was for, when I entered her boudoir. I found my sister Mary there alone.

I told them of my love for Wallis and of my determination to marry her in the opinion of the Prime Minister and the Government. Nothing seemed to me, in fact, more against the situation than my own. We became accustomed to our growing conviction that I could only contemplate giving up the throne of our forefathers. My mother had been accustomed to put this before anything else in life.

All the while I was seeking the right moment to make a request, a new feeling of that I would not have dared to offer. "Please won't you let me bring Wallis Simpson to you?" I asked. But they could not bring them to that phase even then. The two sides of the constitutional conventions would not release them.

The King's message had to go on. Thistledown hours after my writing to Mr. Baldwin I was on the right train to South Wales, for a few days in the arms of the sea. As the train clattered and rattled through the night, I lay to my elbow, well conscious that I knew what by this time have gripped Whitehall. Yet, it was all as plain as daylight: there was no other way. The public resistance was not a matter of small strength over. The public will be stilled. But in some ways it would be our worst problem. But I had declared myself.

(From Page 7) More cynically, had I realized that the "final interview" had consisted of the complete psychology observing her choice of doing the thing over a five-minute period.

Science has recently found that the way a girl position herself when she sits down, how she displays her legs, whether she handles her man, and how she laughs— with a great deal more about her character and disposition than you'd ever dream. John A. Bauer, President, National Hotel Assoc., in a recent address, has long observed, along with other psychologist, that an individual's unconscious tend to reflect his character and personality traits. Preliminary observations had already suggested that women of different psychological types had distinctly different ways of raising their legs when they are down.

They decided to test this hypothesis using 1,000 women as a subject of the experiment. Women were recruited through newspaper advertisements, appeals to women's clubs, notices on college bulletin boards, etc., and paid only that the research was for a psychological study involving personality testing.

Choosing her, was carefully selected.

The first objective was to determine the most common or favorite method of leg crossing. Each subject was instructed to present herself for interview in two modes of dress. "Dandy" (high boots, hat, etc.) and casual suit. A wide variety of subjects was obtained. Women were unaware that leg-crossing or sitting positions was mentally noted by the investigator. The interview in each mode of dress was continued until the subject had ceased her legs five consecutive times in the same manner or never changed her leg position. The leg crossing or position observed was considered to be the one generally favored. This was confirmed after the interview when each was questioned as to her favorite leg position.

The psychologists then adjusted each of the women to a battery of standard personality tests designed to measure social and emotional attributes, general character and temperament.

The results showed marked personality differences for each of the men tested on page 8. To make it time interesting, check your own love— or that of your wife or sweetheart— on page 6 and then look at the personality analysis on page 7. Can you— the test works on the only. In addition, however, in providing a fascinating new means of getting insight into a girl's personality, science seems to have furnished one of the best excuses yet for leg-watching.

A Christmas Prayer

Let us pray that strength and courage abundant be given to all who work for a world of reason and understanding, that the good that lies in every man's heart may day by day be magnified, that men will come to see more clearly, not that which divides them, but that which unites them, so that each hour may bring us closer to our final victory, not of nation over nation, but of man over his own evils and weaknesses, that the true spirit of this Christmas season, joy, its beauty, its hope, and above all its abiding faith, may live among us, that the blessings of peace be ours, the peace to build and grow, to live in harmony and sympathy with others, and to plan for the future with confidence.

Hospital of Tomorrow

Urged by the continual growth of the population and the increasing demand for medical care, the need for a more efficient and humane hospital is becoming more evident. The traditional hospital, with its rigidly defined departments and procedures, is no longer adequate to meet the needs of modern society. The new hospital of tomorrow must be flexible, adaptable, and responsive to the changing needs of its patients.

Developments that point the way...

First, the explosion in medical technology. Advances in medical science are occurring at an unprecedented rate. New diagnostic and therapeutic procedures are being developed, and existing ones are being refined. The result is an increasing demand for hospital facilities that can accommodate these advances.

Second, the emergence of the modern hospital as a total community health center. Instead of being a place of last resort for patients with serious illnesses, hospital facilities are now serving as centers for preventive care, education, and community health services.

Third, the American people are insisting upon a hospital environment. Patients and their families demand a more comfortable and less intimidating hospital setting. The hospital of tomorrow must be a place where people feel at ease.

The future is here.

You walk into the spacious lobby in a modern hospital. The quiet, efficient atmosphere immediately puts you at ease. The receptionist takes your name, address, birthdate, and reason for your visit. She fills out a simple form and gives you a numbered ticket. As you proceed, you notice the cleanliness and order of the place. No overcrowding. No long waits. No sense of urgency.

Your room is clean, bright, airy, and comfortable. The furniture is modern, the beds are soft, and the bathrooms are spacious. The walls are painted in soothing colors. A soft, plush robe lies on the chair for your comfort.

Your nurse, a young, professional woman, introduces herself and explains your stay. She takes your vital signs and orders your medications. She makes sure you are comfortable and that you understand your treatment plan.

The doctors are available 24 hours a day. They are accessible, approachable, and responsive. They take the time to explain your condition and answer your questions. They are not just doctors, but partners in your care.

The food is delicious. The nurses make sure you are well-nourished. They bring you a menu of choices, and they keep track of your dietary needs.

The overall experience is one of care, comfort, and compassion. The staff is dedicated to your well-being. They are caring, kind, and professional.

The hospital of tomorrow is a reality. It is a place where people receive the best possible care in a setting that is designed to meet their needs. It is a place where medical technology and humanism come together to create a healing environment.

Just out — dozens of “Instant Knit” patterns

When we ran an article a few months ago about the new and revolutionary instant
Knitting — You can knit a dress in a day — we were swamped with requests, 2,000,000 of them, asking for free instructions. Never has there been such response to any offer in any publication — we've just now caught up with all of it. And every body's been asking for more, more, more. With the help of Reynolds Yarn Inc., inventors of the new knit method, we've put together a whole book of instructions so you can make an entire wardrobe of Instant Knits. The "Knit-A-Dress-A-Day Book" contains dozens of designs with simple, clear instructions for each one.
The secret of Instant Knitting is in the needles — great big super-stand-once-inch, lightweight aluminum needles which knit great big stitches and use them to six inches of yarn at a time. You can make handsome bulky garnets or lazy Brightonrous. Yarns of different textures, weights and shades combine for great new looks.

Along with the instructions for dresses and measures for women, men and children, you'll find a section called How To Knit, with illustrate-tions, for those non-knitters. You can help yourself by knitting with the big needles.
The "Knit-A-Dress-A-Day Book" is now on the press. Publication date is the last week of December. But, because we expect another handful of orders, we suggest you place your now and get your book before everyone else. It costs only $1.95.
