OIL UNION ACCEPTS PAY OFFER

DENVER (1919) — The organizing committee of the Oil Operators and Allied Workers International Union (COOP) on Wednesday accepted an offer. This prevented the strike of oil workers that had been set for today in Oklahoma City.

The agreement, signed by about 100 representatives of the Oil Operators and Allied Workers International Union (COOP) and the employers, is the final step in the long-time dispute over wages and working conditions. The agreement, which has been in effect since December 1918, is expected to bring an end to the strike.

The union had been seeking an increase in wages and better working conditions, including shorter hours and better safety measures. The employers had been resisting these demands, and the strike had been set for today. However, the agreement reached on Wednesday has ended the strike.

The union has been fighting for better wages and working conditions for many years, and this agreement is a significant victory for the workers. The union has shown that it is a force to be reckoned with, and it has been able to negotiate a better deal for its members.

Finance experts have been sounding the final note for the aging American workforce. And pension plans, once the cornerstone of retirement, are now just another piece of the pie for a healthy retirement. The current trend is toward inflation-indexed plans, discussed on the front page of the New York Times. The question is how to plan for retirement in 1980, given the current economic climate.

General Says Lull Helps North Vietnamese Army

DA NANG, South Viet- nam—Gen. Leonard J. Chapman, commanding general of the U.S. Military Assistance Command in South Vietnam, said the current lull in the fighting is helping not only to restore some normalcy to the North Vietnamese but also to the south as a whole. "The South Vietnamese are making a determined effort to take every inch of territory and can be counted on to do their utmost," Chapman said.

The U.S. and North Vietnamese peace talks seem to be making progress, and Chapman said the North Vietnamese are making a determined effort to take every inch of territory and can be counted on to do their utmost.

Chapman said the U.S. is making a determined effort to take every inch of territory and can be counted on to do their utmost.

"We have not made any promises to any group or nation," Chapman said. "We are committed to the principle of a free and independent North Vietnam, and we will continue to support the efforts of the Vietnamese people to achieve this goal."
