Del Reeves told the Noth-Central Chamber of Commerce that he can't see any of the proposed solutions for the state's educational crisis. Reeves, who is chairman of the chamber's educational committee, said that the solutions proposed by the state legislature and the local school boards have been inadequate.

Nixon’s Got City Hotel ‘On Carpet’

They’re rolling out the red carpet to welcome Nixon to Los Angeles. Nixon is scheduled to visit the city on Monday to attend a fundraiser for Republican candidates. The hotel will be filled with guests, and Nixon will be greeted with a grand welcome. The hotel staff is working hard to ensure that Nixon has a comfortable stay.

Talks Reach ‘Basics’

Senators delay Hickel Approval

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Senate Finance Committee, concerned about the nation's fiscal condition, has delayed action on the Hickel Revenue Act. Senators have expressed concern about the bill's potential impact on the economy and have asked for more information to be gathered before making a decision.

Nixon To ‘Shake Up’ Government

In Jeane Dixon

DEFINITELY is the adjective where she is concerned. Dixon makes her predictions many weeks in advance of the occurrences, and her forecasts have usually proved to be right. Her current predictions appear to be no exception, even though some are hardly expected. She predicts that there will be a shake-up in the administration. This means that there will be many changes in the personnel of the Cabinet and Senate. In addition, the President will be more active and will take a greater interest in the people’s problems. Dixon says that he will work hard to get things done and will not allow the country to go downhill any further.

The United States government has received a report on what is happening on the moon. The document states that the United States government is preparing to launch a new project that will send a manned spacecraft to the moon. The spacecraft will land on the moon and stay there until it is time to return to Earth. The purpose of the mission is to gather scientific data and to study the moon’s surface. The mission is expected to take place in the next few months, and it is believed that the United States will be the first country to land on the moon.

Cowboys Lack Killer Instinct?

By WING ELDER

LOS ANGELES—The Los Angeles Rams are in a tough position in the National Football League. They have a 3-13 record and are in danger of not making the play-offs. The team is struggling to find the killer instinct that has been missing for most of the season.

The defense has been inconsistent, allowing too many points, and the offense is not producing enough touchdowns. The players are disappointed with their performance and are working hard to improve.

Joe’s Knee, Rain Threat To AFL All-Star Contest

FORT WORTH, Texas—The AFL All-Star Contest is in jeopardy due to the threat of rain and Joe’s knee injury. Joe, a key player for the South team, has been nursing a knee injury for several weeks and is not expected to play.

The contest is scheduled for tomorrow night and the weather forecast is calling for rain. The league is considering postponing the game until Sunday.

Don To Guide East

DEL MAR, Calif.—Don, a 32-year-old Trainer, will guide the West to victory over the East in the annual horse race. Don is known for his skill in training horses and has won several races in the past.

The race is scheduled for tomorrow at the Del Mar track.

County Court Load Heavy In January

There have been heavy cases in county courts this month. One of the largest cases involved a murder trial that lasted for several weeks. The defendant was found guilty and sentenced to life in prison.

In other news, a group of elderly Negroes were claimed by Blaze, a group that was reported to be causing disturbances in the area. The county court is working hard to resolve the cases.

Pianist Back In City

‘Acoustics Is An Art,’ Not Science, He Says

The pianist, back in the city after a tour, says that ‘Acoustics Is An Art,’ not science. He claims that the art of playing the piano is subjective and that no formula can be applied to it.

Louis Harris Poll

Public To Give Nixon Benefit Of The Doubt

WASHINGTON, D.C.—In a recent Louis Harris Poll, the public gave Nixon the benefit of the doubt. The poll showed that a majority of Americans believe that Nixon did not collude with the Watergate conspiracy.

The poll was conducted by a reputable polling firm and has been widely reported in the media.

Jeane Dixon's Astrological Forecast

Dr. JEANE DIXON

SUNDAY, JANUARY 11, 1969

You are feeling today: This year will be a year to search, to question and to answers to prayers will be necessary, along with the social situation and that sort of thing. Today's special need is to ask the question and have patience, because there are many unknowns in your life. Try to recognize them and think about them. Some may be short-term, some may be long-term. Take the time of the next few days to examine your life and see where you can make changes.

CANCER: (June 21-July 22): Clear your mind. The next few days can be accomplished. Rest in your reasonable expectations and be sure to clear your mind. The full Moon on the 3rd is very important in your life. It is a time to rest and take it easy.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22): The full Moon will be the focus of your attention today. It is a time to use this energy to move forward. Be aware of the importance of the Moon for your life.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can create important decisions for yourself. You have to decide what is the best move for your life. Be sure to consider all possibilities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have to decide what to do next. Be sure to consider all possibilities. Be sure to think carefully.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 20): You will need to think carefully about what you are doing. Be sure to consider all possibilities.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22): The Moon is a time to pause and think. Be sure to consider all possibilities.

ARIES: (March 21-Apr. 19): You will need to decide what to do next. Be sure to consider all possibilities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): This is a time to make important decisions for yourself. Be sure to consider all possibilities.

Spaghetti Westerns Rescue Van Cleef

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD—The future of the spaghetti western is not in doubt and this summer’s crop will be faster. Although the genre has been criticized for its low-budget production and lack of depth, it has proven to be a popular choice for audiences seeking action and adventure.

One actor who has benefited from this trend is Van Cleef, whose career has been revitalized by his latest spaghetti western. The actor has found success in playing rugged characters who are often victimized by circumstances.

Van Cleef credits his success to his dedication to the craft and his ability to deliver a consistent performance. He has become a favorite among fans for his potent on-screen persona.

Don’t Call Her Charming!

Greer Garson Much, Much More

By KENNY THOMAS

TROUILLARD—Greer Garson’s career has been marked by a reputation for charm and elegance.
However, her latest role in the drama “The Sky” has shown her ability to convey a more diverse range of emotions.

Garson’s performance in “The Sky” has received critical acclaim for its nuance and depth. She has transformed into a character who is both strong and vulnerable, showing a range that has surprised some fans.

The film, directed by Peter Laxton, explores the complex relationships between Garson’s character and others in her life, offering a thought-provoking look at love and loss.

Garson’s ability to transcend stereotypes has earned her a new level of respect and admiration.

Spaghetti Westerns Rescue Van Cleef

By VERNON SCOTT

BELLWEST-UTI - The Bellwest - Utica edition of the Oklahoma Journal published on January 19, 1949, contains the following article:

"The stuntman who has been working with Van Cleef for the past year is now working with C. Scott. There have been a lot of rumors floating around about the future of Van Cleef's career, but now it appears that he is back in action. The stuntman, who is known for his work on many western films, has been working closely with Van Cleef on the set of the new spaghetti western film currently being shot in Italy. The film is named "Spaghetti Westerns Rescue Van Cleef" and is set in the Wild West.

"I have been working with Van Cleef for the past six months," says the stuntman. "We have been working on the set of the spaghetti western film, and it has been a great experience. Van Cleef is a great actor, and he has a lot of talent. The film is going to be a great success, and I am looking forward to working with him again on future projects."

White House A 'Seduction'

By JACK VALENT
Special to Washington Post

Working in the White House means carrying the burden of influencing other people's lives on a daily basis. It's a job that requires not only political savvy, but also emotional intelligence.

Patrick Anderson, a White House staffer, was one of those people who held the title. He worked closely with President John F. Kennedy and played a key role in many of the president's decisions.

The book contains stories and experiences of some of the most influential figures who have worked in the White House, including first ladies, secretaries, and other important figures.

The memoir is a fascinating read for anyone interested in the inner workings of the nation's capital.

Helmet, Hairpiece

Save Player's Scalp

By RICK HOFFMAN

Rommie Lomax, linebacker for the Los Angeles Raiders, suffered a serious injury to his head during a game last season.

He was forced to retire from football due to the severity of the injury. However, he never gave up hope of returning to the sport he loved.

His doctors recommended a new type of headgear that would provide him with the protection he needed to return to the field.

The helmet, equipped with a special hairpiece, was designed to provide extra protection for his scalp, which had been damaged during his injury.

The NFL has since adopted the new safety measures, and Lomax was able to return to the field.

The story of Lomax's determination and the advances in football safety is a testament to the importance of research and innovation in our sports.

James Brown Here For Show Jan 29

James Brown's where it's at, and where it's always been. And because Mr. Charleston also knew that as a child, James Brown's mom used to listen to Ol' Blue Eyes on the radio in their small home in Savannah, Georgia. She would often sit with her children, watching the television and listening to the music. The music inspired her to create a program called "The Saturday Night Show," and it was here that James Brown first made his name.

Even then, James Brown was not the only one enjoying the rhythm and blues scene. It was during this time that he released his first record, "Please, Please, Please," which became a huge hit and solidified his place in the music industry.

The popular rhythm and blues genre became more popular, and James Brown was at the top of the heap. His records sold millions of copies worldwide, and his influence can still be heard in the music today.

In an era when most radio stations were still segregated, James Brown and his band were able to break down barriers and bring people together through their music. His concerts were packed with people of all ages and backgrounds, and he was able to create a space where everyone could come together and enjoy the music.

In this era of increased social awareness, James Brown's music continues to be a source of inspiration and motivation. His message of unity and togetherness is as relevant today as it was when he first began his career.

THE NATURE OF THE PRESIDENCY

"The next President must unite America. He must calm its anger, ease its terrible frictions, and bring its people together once again in peace and mutual respect..."

"The President is the one official who represents every American—rich and poor, privileged and underprivileged. He represents those whose misfortunes stand in dramatic focus, and also the great, quiet forgotten majority—the non-contributors and the non-demonstrators, the millions who ask principally to go their own way in decency and dignity, and to have their own rights accorded the same respect they accord the rights of others. Only if he listens to the quiet voices can he be true to this trust..."

"A President must tell the people what cannot be done immediately, as well as what can. Hope is fragile, and too easily shattered by the disappointment that follows inevitably on promises unkept and unkeepable. America needs charts of the possible, not excursions into the impossible."
Retarded Child—Happiness or Heartbreak?

We must "discourage jokes," says one reader; we must help visitors "find these places," says another. In this sampling of letters touched off by two recent This Week articles.

Sheila's retarded child is seated at home in an exhibition "Too Much" Magazine published Vicky Is a Happy Child, the story of how Robert Humphrey's daughter was successfully raising his retarded granddaughter at home. This resulted in many letters from our readers, one of which was published by Mother a Happy Man as a result of our own experiences. The idea that a child who also has been brought up in a home, this is not what life is all about. To point this out to people who are reading the same thing, the editor of a large publication that has一向 been a few titles.

Dear Editor:
Mrs. Humphrey was certainly speaking my mind when she informed me that I had no time to read, that I did not have time to read. I knew the truth of this statement, I had never heard it before.

Mrs. Humphrey.

Dear Editor:
When my retarded brother was born (almost 13 years ago), the doctors told my parents "put him away, forget about him, it will be a vegetable." They were right.

Even though you know it for what it was, it is not a bad experience. I know you feel that you have to do something to help him. I know you say, "I'm not a failure." But I am to you.

All this week's words are by... "Growing old is no more than a bad habit which a man has no time to form." —André Maurois
Is Reggie Dead?

An agnostic mother finds some old-fashioned answers to these questions:

"Where's heaven?"  "Can I walk there?"  "Is it dark in the ground?"  "Why does good guys get shot?"  "Is God a boy or a girl?"  "What does all that stuff mean?"

For the past seven years I have been very careful not to tell my children about heaven, and so they never ask questions about it. But now I hear them saying things like "God," and I know they are thinking about him. I want them to talk about this with someone else, but I'm not sure who. I'm afraid it's not the right time to start telling them the truth.

I think it's important for them to know that God exists, but I also want them to understand that he is not something that can be seen or touched. It's a mystery that we will never fully understand.

I hope they will be able to see the world around them and think about the beauty of nature and the way things are connected. I believe that if they keep their minds open, they will be able to find answers to their questions.

I want them to know that there is a God who loves them and cares for them, but I also want them to realize that he is not something that we can control or manipulate. He is part of the mystery of life and the universe.

I think it's important for them to know that there is a God who loves them and cares for them, but I also want them to realize that he is not something that we can control or manipulate. He is part of the mystery of life and the universe.

The Secrets of Sleep

By Thomas J. Fleming

Recent scientific breakthroughs offer new hope to insomniaés

Can't sleep? There's a man in Switzerland, now, who may have an answer to your midnight pangs, or one of these days. His name is Dr. Werner Koella, and he said to be the Weizmann Institute for Experimental Biology, and he has discovered a chemical in the brain that seems to control normal sleep.

This substance is known as melatonin, and it is one of a number of substances called "circadian hormones" that researchers have isolated recently. They seem to play a significant role in controlling the mood and emotions.

Dr. Koella has given small doses of this hormone to cats and within five to ten minutes they were sleeping. Electrodes connected to the cat's brain showed the "sleep" waves that signify sleep deep.

Koella has yet to test it on humans, but he hopes to do so in the near future. At the moment, he is studying the effects of the hormone on the sleeping patterns of sheep and cattle.

Recently, the University of Zurich has isolated a new hormone that seems to affect the body's circadian rhythms. This hormone, called the "sleep hormone," is produced by the pineal gland and is released into the bloodstream in response to changes in light and darkness.

This discovery suggests that there may be a way to treat insomnia by administering this hormone. The hope is that by maintaining the body's natural rhythms, sleep patterns can be improved.

Wherever 1969 leads you, this is the most beautiful way to go.

Almost any occasion becomes a special occasion when you arrive in a Cadillac, now the most luxurious car in its class. The complete new beauty of the 1969 Cadillac is matched by the world's finest performance, a promise fulfilled by Cadillac's exclusive DCB II (Double Comfort II) system and Cadillac's exclusive Dual-Comfort front seat.

Is Your Wife a Widow?

White wires may hate to see traveling husbands learn, the prospect of their return can be even more uplifting.

By Van McLeod Wylie

In the black depths of the Arctic Ocean, not far from the North Pole, a long United States submarine steams toward the prowling packs of barren, crazed sea wolves in search of their prey. The position of the cruiser within the ice pack is known to one man only: the captain of the submarine, who has been spotted by whitesharks in the area.

In the past few weeks, two more submarines have been lost in the area, and the search for survivors continues. The crewmen, who have been stranded for days, are in danger of starvation and exposure. They need warm clothes and food.

A recent attack by a pack of wolves has killed two crewmen, and the captain fears that more may be killed if something isn't done soon. The crew is at the mercy of the elements, and every minute counts.

With the help of their harpoon and rifle, they are able to fend off the wolves for a while longer. But the situation is desperate, and they need help.

The captain decides to launch a small boat and make a dash for it before it's too late. Despite the danger, the crewmen are determined to stay and fight until they have no choice but to surrender.

The captain is confident that they will be rescued in time, and he encourages the crew to hold on and keep fighting. The crewmen are unified in their determination to survive.
Is Your Wife a Widow?

Continued... psychiatrists try to help their real clients and care behind a screen of simulated detachment or professional distance. Psychologists may want to help, but simply study human problems, and the more deeply they try, the more detached their help becomes.

One wife — who had managed the bringing up of five children during her husband’s repeated, prolonged business absences — had never previously had psychiatric difficulties. But finally, two years before her husband was shot down in his latest trip, she was suddenly overwhelmed by an attack of intense anxiety, accompanied by uncontrollable weeping and a screaming, delirious headache. Her doctor sent her to a psychiatrist, to whom she confided that all was well if her husband would return “tomorrow.”

At first the doctor was skeptical as to her being away, but she did express the hopelessness in her life and in her family caused by her frequent absences. Eventually it came passing as compulsory — all the previous years of happiness — “I only wish I could have known what love was.”

Sure wavers who are suffering from such depression may display acute signs which include uncontrollable weeping, irritability, deep depression, and loss of appetite. Often develop a variety of debilitating psychoneurotic illnesses. The illness serves as a reactions to the husband. It is a sheet but effective pattern against the depression caused by the waders.

T he psychiatrists have discovered that some of the more obvious “perfect solutions” to the problems are actually pitfalls, instead. For example, if a wife needs “understanding” when her husband is away, it means her husband, who causes her mother to stay with her. This is what happens when many women in which we have her mother to stay with her, but, according to the wife, it is necessary to create more happiness problems than it solves.

With the husband away, the family settles into a very casual routine of having breakfast one night, helping out the children, preparing the wife’s favorite baby’s bed. The wife enjoys the unrestricted hours of an easier daily schedule, minus household chores, family meetings, company and leisure and the opportunity to more share in many of her future responsibilities. But when the husband returns, all this “outside” work must be done and more often she must resume full responsibility for raising the husband. She has been unable to “get back with mother” as much as she should have. The wife may experience the “miserable” feelings of being “single” way too much, and the waders are usually less likely to feel sick.

“Besides,” confided Dr. Jay, “the return of the father after a day, or a week, everyone in the house, as in the children are concerned, may see it like being “back Grandma and us” and the wife, finding her mother away.”

(The same sort of emotional conflict may manifest itself in an occasional absence after a longer illness or other close relative comes to stay. Frequent contact with relatives can be helpful, but it cannot be overdone.)

Similarly poor wife may strike up the idea with the children to stay with her own family. The children may be doted on by the grandparents and the wife relieved of much of her daily responsibilities.

Then the husband returns home and “spins it.”

The wife who does not know on any sort of heavy, nonstop, nonstop, nonstop. But it may happen that he is happy and the wife is happy, and the child is happy, and the mother is happy, and the marriage is happy.

A psychiatrist visited a married couple for five years who became depressed and unwell in the weeks following the husband’s return home from a thirteen-month tour of duty in the service. Their one-year-old son had been sleeping with his mother during the husband’s absence. Now the husband noticed that the baby return to his own room. The wife complained that he didn’t care for the child. The emotional problems that followed from bringing the baby home with the small were many, and the wife was having a severe crisis the was overwhelming.

As an indication of how distressing it may be for children to be shuffled around during a father’s absence, Dr. Jay points out that when this child was returned to his own bed, he had his toilet training and became a problem.

Another source of emotional strain upon women whose husbands travel extensively or work long hours is often is a matter of routine. The wife has a routine of going to work, or to housework, or to take the children from the bus stop. If the husband return to his own bed, he had his toilet training and became a problem.

And — I’ve got all I can handle, just taking care of the children” — “I’ll call you when I’m here to pay off the family bill.” — “I know how this family needed the help.” — “I’ve got the time I can handle.” — “I’ve got all I can handle, and I’m going back to work.”

How can families best cope with the emotional stress of having a husband away?

“Irrelevant,” says Dr. Jay, “is to understand clearly the cause of the problem. You have the advantage of being not only a successful husband, but a successful husband. The more your husband’s heart can be strengthened by his feeling your support, the more the problem will be solved.”

Joan Baez goes C & W — The safest day to drive — Fancy pants for miniskirts

By Robbie Ashley

MINNEAPOLIS — A San Francisco designer has opened a new boutique for the city's finest: A. W. Peary. The venue, named after the famous explorer, is a haven for those seeking a blend of traditional and modern styles. The boutique features a unique collection of clothing, accessories, and home decor items, all designed to reflect the spirit of the Arctic region. The atmosphere is cozy and inviting, with soft lighting and comfortable seating areas. Visitors can enjoy a cup of coffee while shopping or simply relax and browse the merchandise.

COUNTRY GIRL: It is said that Joan Baez has gone country for the Nashville crowd and is looking for Country and Western model — M. A. Davis, Minneapolis. Not entirely. She did go into Nashville this week for a recording session. That's where she did the double duty of all Bob Dylan songs, including "Blowin' in the Wind," which it seems. In addition, she did a full tour of C & W-styled Europe. She's all country C & W music, threading in an occasional country song for the events, but this is the first time she's done it in Europe.

MELANCOLY MARKS: It is true that Maria Callas had a nervous breakdown after Otello, suggested her for Jacqueline Kennedy — Y. Y., Chicago. There are a million rumors about Collins suffering from melancholy, Collins is a schematic, Collins is a schematist, Collins is a schematist, etc. — none of them true. As a matter of fact, she's been smiling and dancing all day the big events in Europe.

WHERE'S DUSTY? What's that face, Dusty Springfield up to these days? D.D., Little Rock.

Dusty, dusty, Dusty. The star of a Broadway play "Dusty" and a pleasant reminder of the days of old. It seems that the star has been working hard in recent years, and now she's back in the spotlight with a hit musical. The show is a hit, and Dusty is having a great time performing on stage once again.

YOU CAN'T MISS: "Don't Bother Me" is one of the most popular songs of the year. E. S., Jackson.

Making Of With FALSE TEETH

Up to 75% Price

What's different about this book is that it actually describes how to make false teeth. The author, a professional dental technician, explains each step in detail, from shaping the teeth to attaching them to the gums. The book includes clear photographs and detailed instructions, making it easy for anyone to follow along and create their own set of false teeth.

CONFIDENT OR SCARRED? They can have it both ways. T. L., Cleveland.

For those looking to improve their smiles, this book offers a practical guide. It covers everything from choosing the right type of false teeth to maintaining them properly. The author provides valuable insights on how to achieve the desired look, whether it's for everyday use or special occasions.

The book also covers the process of creating custom-made false teeth, including impressions and laboratory work. With step-by-step guidance, readers can learn to make their own false teeth, allowing them to customize the appearance to their liking.

In summary, "Making Of With FALSE TEETH" is an instructional book that provides a comprehensive guide on making false teeth. It is perfect for anyone interested in improving their smile or creating a set of false teeth for specific occasions.
Telling It Like It Isn’t

I’ve always been a fan of the “Buck and Dandy” concept that has been so popular in recent years. I think it’s a great way to make people laugh and think. In this issue, I’m excited to share an article about a TV series that has gained a lot of attention recently. It’s called “Buck and Dandy,” and it’s about a couple who travels around the world, trying to find the perfect spot for their next adventure. The series is known for its heartwarming storylines and its ability to make viewers laugh out loud. I think it’s a great show that will appeal to everyone, whether you’re a fan of adventure or just looking for a good laugh.

Wildlife Is Tame

Jean’s charms include hippo, iguana, birds, and tortoises on “Savannah’s Islands”

BY BILL LEVINSON

How do you get on TV, even in the big city? One way is to make friends... Jean’s antelope is a star! She’s a natural on television, and the viewers love her. She’s been on several shows, and her popularity is only growing.

Jean’s story is one of hope and resilience. She was once a wild animal, living in the savannah. But when she was injured, she was taken in by a kind family who cared for her and helped her recover. Now she’s a beloved member of the community, and she’s proof that even the most unlikely stories can have happy endings.

In the end, it’s all about the relationships we make. Whether you’re a TV star or just a regular person, it’s the connections we form that truly matter. So let’s all remember to spread love and kindness wherever we go, and let’s all be grateful for the people and animals who make our world a better place.

Russian Recipes from Alaska

Soe delightful traces of Eastern days in the land of Eskimos and Indians

EXTRA, ALASKA

The small, gray town of Sitka bay is the heart of the Alaska fishing industry. Until recently, Sitka was a bustling port with many different nationalities living and working here.

The town is located on the southern tip of the large island of Sitka, which is part of the Alexander Archipelago. The town is surrounded by beautiful scenery, including mountains, forests, and a large body of water.

Sitka has a unique history, as it was once a major trading post for the Russians, who established a fort here in the mid-18th century.
