Volunteers To Help Emotional Children
Experts Turning To Parents

BY BROOKE CLARY

Experts in child guidance are turning to impressed ex-s from a recent visit to a mental health clinic in Oklahoma. According to Dr. Elst, the clinic has made progress in treating children with serious emotional problems. He noted that Oklahoma City has no established mental health facility in the large U.S. cities, and that the state is seeking to expand its services to meet the needs of children in Oklahoma. Dr. Elst said the clinic provides services to children in need, including therapies, counseling, and medication. It also offers support services to families and caretakers. The clinic has been successful in treating children with a wide range of emotional issues, including anxiety, depression, and attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD). Dr. Elst said the clinic is working on expanding its services to reach more children in need.

In approaching the problem of children's mental health,

Dr. Elst emphasized the importance of early intervention.

Early intervention can be effective in reducing the impact of mental health issues on children's lives. Dr.

Elst recommended that parents and caretakers be aware of the signs of mental health issues in children and seek help as soon as possible. He noted that the clinic provides education and support to families and caretakers to help them understand the signs and treatment options available. The clinic has also been able to reach a wider audience through its outreach programs and community partnerships.

There are other areas of interest at the research conference being held by the Elst Foundation. One of these areas is the development and implementation of early intervention programs to help children with mental health issues. Another area of interest is the need for increased funding and support for mental health services in Oklahoma.

The Elst Foundation is committed to improving the well-being of children with mental health issues in Oklahoma. They are working to increase awareness of the importance of early intervention and to provide resources and support to families and caretakers. The foundation is also working to expand its services to reach more children in need.
