Toll Road's Fate To Face New City Team

Only 2 of 8 Council Members Seeking Re-Election

Although the emoluments of the 8-member Tulsa City Council have been increased by a fourth, only 2 of the council members, H. W. Schrader and I. W. Smith, have announced their intent to seek re-election to the council. In the 1929 election, 6 of the 8 councilmen contested their seats, but all were returned to the council.

Politics of the past have been a dominating factor in the recent campaign. In the 1929 election, the Democratic ticket won 6 of the 8 council seats. This year, although there are a number of Democrats running, the Republican ticket has a strong chance of winning back some of the seats lost in 1929. The issue of the toll road has been a major factor in the campaign. The toll road, which is now in operation, has proved to be a financial drain on the city and has caused much controversy among the citizens. The councilmen who are seeking re-election are expected to campaign heavily on the issue of the toll road, and the outcome of the election will be closely watched.

In addition to the council elections, there are many local and state issues that will be decided at the polls. The candidates for mayor, the city manager, and the city auditor are all facing tough opposition. The issue of the city's schools is also a major topic of discussion, with some candidates promising to increase funding and others vowing to cut costs.

The election will be held on November 8th, and the results will have a significant impact on the future of Tulsa. The city is facing many challenges, and the new council will be expected to address these issues and work towards a brighter future for Tulsa.

Tulsaans Collect Railroad Spikes

Tulsa City Councilman E. J. Houston has presented a petition to the city attorney for the removal of 560 railroad spikes, which were recently found to be in use in the city. The spikes, which are known as "shanks," are used to hold the tracks together and are considered a threat to public safety. The councilman is expected to introduce a resolution to formally request that the spikes be removed.

The councilmen have been called to listen to the petition and consider the issue. The city attorney has been asked to review the legal implications of removing the spikes and to provide guidance on the process. The councilman has stated that he is confident that the petition will be granted and that the spikes will be removed as soon as possible.

In related news, the councilmen are also considering a proposal to increase the city's budget for public safety. The city has been facing a number of issues, including a high number of crimes and accidents, and the councilmen are determined to address these issues and provide a safe environment for the citizens of Tulsa.

Majority Against Moon Landing
Most Americans Say It's Not Worth Cost

In a hard-fought battle, opponents of the moon landing have won a significant victory in the U.S. public opinion. A new poll shows that the majority of Americans believe the program is not worth the cost.

The poll, conducted by the National Opinion Research Center, found that 53% of respondents believe the money spent on the moon program could have been better spent elsewhere. Only 42% support continuing the program, with 5% undecided.

Opponents argue that the money spent on the moon program could have been used to address pressing domestic issues such as education, healthcare, and infrastructure. They point to the high cost of the program, estimated at over $100 billion, and argue that it diverts funds from more pressing needs.

Supporters of the program argue that it represents a significant scientific achievement and a symbol of American ingenuity and determination. They point to the technological advancements that have resulted from the program, such as improved computers and communication technologies.

The poll results come as NASA is preparing to launch the Artemis mission, which aims to land the first woman and the next man on the moon. The mission is set to cost over $20 billion.

While the majority of Americans do not support continuing the program, the poll shows that there is still a significant level of support. Of those who do support the program, 34% believe it is important for national prestige, 27% believe it is important for scientific research, and 20% believe it is important for technological development.

The poll was conducted among a representative sample of 1,500 adults, aged 18 and over, across the United States. It has a margin of error of ±3 percentage points.
