Marines To Combat Jackers?

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Defense Department has authorized the Marines aboard aircraft to try to combat the issue of bag snatchers, according to a memo issued by Maj. Gen. John Hagedorn, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

The Pentagon took the opportunity under the guise of a military exercise to announce unspecified military assistance to those in harm's way, according to a source in the House Armed Services Committee.

The note suggests that Marines aboard aircraft may be involved in training exercises to combat the issue of bag snatchers. It does not provide details on how the Marines will be used or what specific actions will be taken.

The source also said the Marines will be involved in training exercises to combat the issue of bag snatchers. The source did not provide details on how the Marines will be used or what specific actions will be taken.

Nixon To Shape Oil Policy

The Washington Post - President Richard Nixon has announced that he will shape the new policy on oil imports, concentrating on the need to encourage domestic oil production and reduce reliance on foreign oil. Nixon has indicated that he will work with Congress to ensure that legislation is passed that will promote domestic oil production. The new policy is expected to include measures to increase production and reduce reliance on foreign oil.

Oil
Corporate Farming Decision Postponed

The Houston Oil Corp. of New York, the second largest oil company in the United States, is postponing a decision on whether to proceed with a large corporate farming project. The company announced it would postpone its de-sion until the end of the year.

Lovely Weather for "Low"

Cameron B. Allen, President of the company, said that the local Houston weather conditions were not conducive to a productive farming operation. He added that the company was considering other options for its agricultural operations.

Hijackers

The Houston Oil Corp. is also dealing with a recent hijacking event that occurred on one of its oil tankers. The company has launched an investigation into the incident.
