Did Mme. Chennault Tip Ballot For Nixon?

By SHERI PEARSON

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has an opportunity to end his years as a political leader with a victory over his chief rival, Vice President Spiro Agnew.

The latest poll shows that Nixon is leading Agnew by a margin of 47-41 percent in the race for the White House.

The poll also finds that Nixon has a significantly lower favorability rating than Agnew, 66-34 percent.

The poll was conducted by the Pew Research Center for the People and the Press.

The poll was released Tuesday, and it found that Nixon's lead has narrowed slightly since the last poll, which was conducted in late October.

The poll also found that Nixon's lead has narrowed since the last poll, which was conducted in late October.

Nats' Halldin In Trouble

When Standard Life was founded in 1880, one of the principle corporate goals was to move the professional and private insurance industry to a higher level. The company achieved this goal through the creation of insurance companies that offered insurance to a wide range of businesses, and by promoting the use of life insurance, not just for the wealthy, but for the working class as well.

We have reached our goal and are now able to offer insurance to all Americans. Despite the challenges we have faced over the years, we remain committed to meeting the needs of our customers.

OIL News

Giant Contab On Tap

The biggest controversy over a major oil discovery in years is shaping up around the surprise potential of a field near the border of Oklahoma and Kansas. The field, known as the "Giant Contab," is attracting attention from oil companies and investors worldwide. The field has the potential to produce billions of barrels of oil, making it one of the most significant discoveries in recent history.

The fashion world is not the only scene in which fashions are created. In some places, the fashions are just as important...even more important...than in others. It's not just the fashions that are important, but the people who wear them. And if you want to know what's happening in the world of fashions, you have to look at the people who wear them.

They are the ones who create the trends.

"Dear Dr. Spock..."

The famed baby doctor's mailing is overflowing with shears and jars, these days, in the wake of his anti-war crusade

BY ABLENE AND HOWARD EISENBERG

When Dr. Benjamin Spock's secretary opened the mail one recent morning, out of an envelope protruded a Houston, Texas, mailer, a pile of letters. Fed into the typewriter of what had once been the famous pediatrician's 800-city, long-distance help line, "Rolly and Child Care," was a note: "My son is going to grow up paddling the Mississippi Bay.

Letters like this to Everyone's Bedside Pediatrician have swelled with increasing frequency at Dr. Spock's New York City office ever since his newsletter — later expanded — in a Boston medical course on charges of counseling young men to evade the draft.

Wanted a Centuries, California, mother wrote, "How you can stop at eight am I see you. We made our children to be dammed and be loyal to is, and abandanas is very patriotic and faced to consent them all that I am doing my country's laws. Perhaps you could break up on some propaganda and set up booths in the city streets to help segment out some of the kids you've caught.

Even loyal kids Spock mothers are bashed about, Wrote one, from Boston, but one is overwhelmed, "How can you change to revolutionaries?" And an Edmonton, N. Y., mother declared, "You look like a bunch of Hells in me raising my children. The letters are stern, the tone is angry, and a rhetoric band holds it together. But now you have done more than the massacre made much more.

Letters like these are not Spock. He was well aware when he turned his attention from baby formulas to peace solutions that he was confronting a professional categorical that had made a lifetime in the building. "Rolly," he explained, "is the time I'm putting up my mind about being the peace movement with both feet, but thoughted myself over the point of being brought up to老头y, happy, well-adjusted children with one hand and the other preparing a world in which they'd go on to be improved." And since letters came to praise Spock's decision: "The nation is roughly no to me — than to villy in. "I turned to you for help with my husband because you made sense then. You are still making sense. If you ever again to help outside in your present struggle, think of the thousands of mothers and sons you are speaking for.

"The pacifism of a 13-year-old is bitter enough. We found your book and you were every question that new parent had. But we got no reply and no satisfaction from your editorial."

"I saw a note from a child, and I can't tell you what a comfort your book was. Thank you for that, but most of all, for now.

"I am a Mennonite, New York, mother numbered one. "Thank you for the power of mind on the moral, and the presence of the child in a world in which it can have the power to be peaceful."

"I hired you to help me with my husband because you made sense then. You are still making sense. If you ever again to help outside in your present struggle, think of the thousands of mothers and sons you are speaking for.

The Marriage That Almost Worked

BY FRED LAWRENCE GUILES

Most people thought Marilyn Monroe’s match with Arthur Miller was doomed from the start — bickering, finicky and frankly for the first time, the award-winning playwright tells how wrong they were.

Arthur Miller is one of America’s best-known playwrights, the other being Tennessee Williams. (Edward Albee is known, of course, for what happens behind the scenes, but Miller and Williams are famous to millions who have never seen a play.)

Miller probably has the big ego because of his marriage to Marilyn Monroe.

Miller has only married once from a period of inactivity that followed in the wake of his first marriage to Arlene, his first wife, and a noted actress in the 1940s. She was married to Miller in 1947 and their marriage lasted until 1950.

Miller and Monroe first met in 1951 when she was 19 and he was 24. They were married in 1956 and divorced in 1961.

Miller’s first marriage ended in 1951 and he then married the actress Anna Neagle. They were married until 1953.

Miller’s second marriage to Marilyn Monroe was ended in 1961 when Monroe died of a drug overdose. Miller was not charged with any wrongdoing.

Miller is now married to his third wife, the dancer and actress Millie Perkins, and they have two children, John and Susan. They live in the Hamptons, Long Island, New York.

Miller’s marriages have been the subject of much speculation and he has been the target of much criticism.

Miller’s first marriage to Anna Neagle was ended in 1953. He then married the actress Adele Mara in 1954, but they were divorced in 1956.

Miller’s second marriage to Marilyn Monroe was ended in 1961 when Monroe died of a drug overdose. Miller was not charged with any wrongdoing.

Miller’s current wife is Millie Perkins, a dancer and actress. They have two children, John and Susan. They live in the Hamptons, Long Island, New York.

Miller is a dedicated theater person and has been involved in many productions as a director and producer.

Miller is also a prominent public figure and has been active in many causes, including the arts, education and social justice.

Miller has been nominated for several Academy Awards, including Best Director and Best Actor, but has never won.

Miller is known for his intelligence, wit and passion for the arts. He is a respected figure in the theater world and has been honored with many awards and accolades.

Miller is often cited as one of the greatest American playwrights of the 20th century.

Miller’s most famous plays include "Death of a Salesman," "The Crucible" and "A View from the Bridge." He has written several screenplays as well, including "The Price," "Irma La Douce" and "The Misfits."

For a Service to You

Nothing in this country is more criticized than hospital food—except at Memorial Hospital in Manchester, Connecticut. Over a year ago, the hospital claimed an ancient promise and started serving its patients gourmet foods at lunch or dinner—had been terrible. The hospital board declared, "Let's get a really good chef, even if it's a man.

The new chef turned out to be Otto Stetten, a big, brassy, food-loving man who had run famous restaurants in Hartford and Las Vegas and New York and San Francisco, and who had worked as a chef on a ship. He was hired by the hospital and turned things around. Today, the hospital is known for its food, and the patients are happy.

"Complain again or else we're doin' it right," the chef said. "I'm gonna make 'em eat it."

Meanwhile, at Memorial Hospital, a new chef has been hired to take over the kitchen. He's a young, energetic man who has worked in several restaurants around the country. He's been brought in to help improve the food and make it more appealing to the patients.

"I want to make sure that the patients are happy," he said. "I'm gonna make them eat it."

At Memorial Hospital, the chefs are working hard to make sure that the patients are happy with the food. They're experimenting with new dishes and trying to make the food more appealing to the patients.

"We're gonna make 'em eat it," the chef said. "I'm gonna make 'em eat it."

Mini-debate on campus outbreaks ...
Laurie Wyne — success at 17 and answers to your questions

BY CAROL ROTWIN

In answer to an exercise in your column that you published in your last issue, I would like to respond to your question about the current campus outbreaks.

The main point of controversy on campus is the issue of student activism. Many students are frustrated with the lack of change on campus and are calling for more action. However, some parents and administrators are concerned about the potential for violence and disruption.

I believe that students have the right to express their opinions and demand change. It is important for us to have open and respectful discussions about these issues. Only then can we find a way to move forward and create a better campus environment.

The success of student activism can be seen in the recent protests. Students have been able to bring attention to important issues and have forced administrators to take action.

However, it is also important to consider the impact of these protests on the larger community. We must ensure that our actions do not harm others or undermine the work that we are trying to accomplish.

Thank you for allowing me to share my thoughts on this important topic. I look forward to hearing more from you and your readers.

Is it true that my favorite singer, John Denver, has been seen in San Diego? If so, was he spotted with anyone? — William F. Smith, San Diego

Yes, John Denver has been seen in San Diego. He was spotted at a local beach with his family.

The famous singer has been in the news recently for his work to protect the environment. He has been involved in several initiatives to promote sustainability and has even launched his own line of eco-friendly products.

It is always exciting to see these celebrity sightings, but it is also important to remember that these people are also ordinary citizens who are trying to live their lives. Let's respect their privacy and avoid creating unnecessary commotion around these sightings.

In other news, the popular TV show "The Young and the Restless" has been renewed for another season. This is great news for fans of the show, as it means that they will be able to continue enjoying the drama and romance for many years to come.

And finally, a new book has been released that is sure to be a hit with fans of the TV show "Grey's Anatomy." The book features exclusive interviews with the cast members and behind-the-scenes stories. It is a must-read for any fan of the show.

In conclusion, there is plenty of exciting news to report! Keep an eye out for more updates and let us know if you have any questions or comments.

Chicago Man Reveals a Short Cut to Authorship

Disclose little-known switch by which beginners often get paid for their work and transform themselves into bestselling authors. Now anyone who wants to write a book for profit can sell his work for money without spending money years "learning the trade."

For years and years nobodies have had a "career" on one of the most profitable authors' markets ever known. They've been going quietly ahead selling thousands and thousands of books in a short time and making thousands and thousands of dollars in royalties and license fees. Only a fraction of them has been known by the name of the author. It's a secret! And now I am going to let you in on the secret.

Mr. Barrett, one of the world's foremost authors, has spent years and years on his secret. He is the one who, with his book, has made himself known to the world. He is the one who, with his book, has made himself known to the world. He is the one who, with his book, has made himself known to the world. He is the one who, with his book, has made himself known to the world.

Mr. Barrett says that the only skill required to do this is the ability to write a simple outline plan. Almost anyone with some school education can write well enough to follow Mr. Barrett's plan. Once you know the secret, you can write a book that will sell and make money. You can write a book that will sell and make money. You can write a book that will sell and make money. The Atomic Clock Could Save Your Life

Air safety has become a frantic race between 1,000-passenger jets and a new warning system based on a device that is accurate to within a millionth of a second every century.

By LLOYD MALLAN

Feasible carrying twice as many passengers will mean bigger residuals, new systems for handling baggage, even drastic new plans for customs inspection and luggage processing. And the jet age is only a decade old — supersonic jets are expected to be selected for maximum flight maneuver to avoid collision.

4. It must flush any warning signals at the point of warning notices.

5. It must also and not a warning to other planes in the vicinity, which are carrying larger CAS units, not to take the same route moment — that there would be little danger of collisions.

The technical problems and requirements are extremely important to the development of an atomic clock. A federal investigation against an all-living system would work only if every plane in the sky over a given area is almost simultaneously in contact with a signal from every other plane — through the sky. This trick is to be achieved in real-time by a receiver in each plane equipped with a computer brain which performs the complex calculations necessary to establish the position of the plane and the relative position of the other planes.

One reason why scientists and engineers have been rather slow in developing the CAS system is the problem of finding clocks precise enough to control both the transmitting and the receiving of time. In the proper time, if a control clock goes slow more than 5 seconds during the hour, the signal can be received by the receiver and the signal can be used to correct the time. But the atomic clocks now in use are more than 10 times as accurate than the present system.

The conclusion has come: straight out of the space age — the form of an atomically accurate “atomic clocks” which are used for communications between aircraft and between other planes, can be used for telephone conversations with other planes in the area. The new clock, which is a type of atomic clock, is based on the use of a new type of atomic clock, which is based on a new type of atomic clock, which is a type of atomic clock, which is a type of atomic clock, which is a type of atomic clock, which is a type of atomic clock, which is a type of atomic clock, which is a type of atomic clock, which is a type of atomic clock.

CHARLIE RICE'S PUNCHBOWL

Oh, Those Coin Machines!

They'll tell you anything from a fish to a treated daguita!

SOME days ago, reader Edward Lase (Brunswick, Md.) wrote me a rather excitable letter stating that he had been on a fishing trip in Carolina, and in a tiny hotel room, he'd found a coin-operated vending machine that dispensed air screws.

"I never expected to live long enough to get a worm out of a coin-machine," said Mr. Lase. "The whole subject might be a rewarding path of research for you. What do they think up next — hay for mice?"

I wish to announce that I have finally concluded my research, and the answer is yes, Mr. Lase, there are machines that dispense fish. You stick in your coins and get a plastic bag with a real, live gurnard. In fact, it's hard to think of anything you can't get out of a coin-machine nowadays. I'm sure you've seen these that dispense food, or aod or such travel convenience goods like coffee, perfume, soap, cologne, and sundries. But have you heard that:

• In transit there are machines that sell souvenirs. Stick in your coins, adjust the compass, and you'll get a miniature handbag of pure oxygen. They say it works wonders when you're lost in Alaska.

• Not only are there machines that will give you change for a dollar bill or a five-dollar bill, but extra machines will change American currency into foreign.

• For the ladies, there are machines that dispense oiled combs and machines that equip hairspray through a hose, and others in the world that will tell paper change and paper money.

The most popular machines of all are found in a fewPOINTS French churches which are so badly the worships' knees get very old when they kneel. Therefore many pew's have kneading-boards that knead up when you put a stress on the doorknob.

Coin machines are not at all a modern invention. They go back at least to 100 B.C., when they were used to dispense holy water in Egyptian temples. In China, they were used to sell pencils as early as 1679 A.D. In England the first coin machines appeared in 1843 — you stuck in a large penny and got a jigsaw set. One of the first in America — A. U. Smith of the 150th — was a real cooker. It dispensed all the American foods blank.

Germany once issued credits for the first international postage stamp, in 1867, but this side's cash on all is spread in America, as the humorist in Europe. The latest idea in this field is a sort of grandchild of the Automat — the robotic money machine. Some of the really modern hotels have machines that make 1000, and you can press a button for your favorite drink. It's delivered automatically to your room, and the charge is put on your bill.

The only trouble is how can you tell your troubles to a push button?
