OLD CITY’ IN NEW HEYDAY

Panel Starts Preservation Task Friday

By PIPER HUGUEN

When Altoona’s civic-minded preservationists present a motion Friday evening to begin an action plan to save the historic section of the city, they will have the approval of the Altoona Board of Trade, which organized the effort and called the meeting.

The group that spearheaded the attempt to save Altoona’s Old City, the section of town that is, according to a long-established legend, the site of one of the first permanent settlements made in the state of Iowa, is the 13th Street Association. The group was formed about a year ago by citizens who were concerned about the deterioration of the area.

The association will offer its members the chance to become involved in the preservation effort.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. at the Altoona Public Library.

To Preserve The Intangible

After several years of discussion, Altoona’s Old City is being made a reality to make a visible impact on the downtown area.

To get the area started, a group of citizens has formed a citizens’ committee to work on the project.

The committee will meet at the Altoona Public Library on the first Tuesday of each month at 8 p.m.

The meeting will be open to the public, and interested persons are encouraged to attend.

'Queen' Gives Remedy For 'Flu: Kitchen Chicken Soup

By LORRIS DEERING

The Queen, who is the widow of the late Governor, has been recovering from a severe case of the Flu. In her kitchen, she has devised a remedy that she believes will cure the illness. She said, "I have been trying different recipes, but this one seems to be the most effective. It is made with chicken broth, onions, and garlic. I believe it is the garlic that does the trick."

She shared her recipe with the local paper, and many people have started to try it. Some have reported feeling better after only a few days. The Queen, who is known for her cooking skills, said, "I believe in natural remedies. I have been using garlic for many years, and it has never let me down."

The recipe is as follows:

Ingredients:
- 2 chicken breasts
- 3 tablespoons of garlic
- 2 onions
- 8 cups of water
- Salt and pepper to taste

Instructions:
1. Rinse the chicken breasts and chop them into small pieces.
2. Crush the garlic and chop the onions.
3. Place all the ingredients in a large pot.
4. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat and simmer for 2 hours.
5. Serve hot and enjoy.

The Queen also advised taking plenty of rest and drinking lots of fluids. She said, "I believe in taking care of oneself. This illness can be very exhausting, and it's important to give your body a chance to recover."

Many people have expressed their gratitude to the Queen for sharing her recipe. One woman said, "This has been a lifesaver. I have been feeling terrible, but after trying this, I feel much better."

The Queen's recipe has been shared on social media, and many people have started to experiment with different ingredients. Some have added herbs and spices, while others have used different types of chicken. The Queen said, "I am happy to see people experimenting with my recipe. I believe in sharing knowledge and helping others."

The Queen's recipe has become a sensation, and many people are trying it with success. She said, "I am grateful to see people benefiting from my recipe. I will continue to share my knowledge and help others in any way I can."

THIS WEEK
'The overwhelming wonderment is why in the world we can't appreciate what we have'
BY STEWART L. UDALL

In a moment of frustration not long ago, the mayor of one of our larger cities expressed the concern of environmental planners, conservationists and most of his fellow jurors when he complained in public:

"If we can't control, we will be remembered as the generation that put a man on the moon while allowing knee-deep in garbage."

In July, with a little luck and the constant industrial skill of our scientists and engineers, we will place men on the moon and return them safely. Apparitions of an apocalyptic world, self-annihilation will not. There will be another year of milestones and learnings about American ingenuity and the spirit of adventure that successfully sent us into outer space.

But in 1965 we will also have to face with many critical questions of national priority that are not of national purpose as we know it.

The earth we have come to know the building of an infinitely costly (and perhaps necessary) anti-ballistic missile system, have the will to carry out these projects and social programs that will build new bridges between the races and the countries in our land?

Economists tell us of the near certainty that the costs of goods and services available—the great national product—will be rising by as much as $20,000,000 a year. We have an abundance of wealth to apply to a first-class opportunity to decide that a major proportion of it be devoted to hiking and removing this condition—this country.

In the long run, a nation revolved by the quality of life is in its future. I believe that we have reached a point in our history when we can predict that a new machine will be built: the balanced, international cities that are the hallmark of a mature civilization. We need the kind of leadership to bring new technology and design to the cities and to the new structures of education.

We must be more concerned with the condition of our children than with half-a-century of engineering. Not only our personal lives—but our legacy the leadership in the world community—and with the environment we make of our national priorities.

I am not opposed to the further exploration of outer space. But let it be a modest program based on scientific inquiry, not cold war competition. The time has come to give pressing priority to the problems of the inner space that is our home. What is at stake? If we get a whole colony of men on the moon and fail to create a balanced, international and more livable cities in these limited States, on this Earth which is our home, which is the natural habitat of man.

I am convinced that we are not only in need of new principles, but a new atmosphere in nation building as well. We need a new partnership of government and industry and labor that can produce the balanced, international cities that are the hallmark of a mature civilization. We need the kind of leadership to bring new technology and design to the cities and to the new structures of education.

We need the kind of leadership that can produce the balanced, international cities that are the hallmark of a mature civilization.

Mini Gardens

You can live in a high-rise apartment and have your home-grown vegetables, too — according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which has put together a special report for city farmers.

"When Mary Peer does the grocery shopping for her two-room apartment, she'll go no farther than the balcony of her third-floor apartment for the needed tackle. There she can pick tomatoes fresh from the vine and pull radishes and onions crisp from the soil.""You can live in a high-rise apartment and have your home-grown vegetables, too — according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which has put together a special report for city farmers.

When Mary Peer does the grocery shopping for her two-room apartment, she'll go no farther than the balcony of her third-floor apartment for the needed tackle. There she can pick tomatoes fresh from the vine and pull radishes and onions crisp from the soil. She keeps her "mini-garden" in two red wagons and a toy wheelbarrow. Then, her whole family can be called together to help the plants on cold nights in early spring or to position them in the sun during their growing season.

"I'll forget what home-grown tomatoes taste like," says Mrs. Peer, who, despite the fact that she works for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has just moved into the farm as front of the other 50,000 Americans now living in apartments. With the home-grown vegetables, a close-up view of these modern-day dwellers is kind, specialists at the Agricultural Research Center, Beltsville, Md., have prepared a new bulletin, "Mini-Gardens for Vegetables" that contains directions for growing 18 kinds of vegetables in containers. The bulletin joystick on a whole new world to window-sill gardeners, who up until now may have considered themselves with an African violet or a pet of alfalfa seeds. "You can't imagine how much pleasure you get from growing your own — even just enough for a salad or two," says Mrs. Peer with obvious pride in her own humble mini-garden. "It's amazingly easy, too. There seems to have been as much as a movement to encourage gardening as a matter of personal cooking. You can grow sunflower seeds, which are attractive; the plastic containers are colorful and inexpensive, and take a look at these peppers."

"The Mini-Garden needs no water, brown, yellow tablets and are apparently just as active, albeit in somewhat different fashions. When put in water, the tablets swell up into two-inch plant pots complete with growing medium. You then sow seeds in them, and when the plants are up, simply transfer them, pot and all, into a larger container. The bottom half of milk containers makes a good seedling dish, and you, too," says Mrs. Peer. "That's what she used to start her tomato plants."

"The thought that I have isn't out of the new bulletin, which deals just with annual vegetables," explains Mrs. Peer in response to comments on the plant's amusing beauty. "Kohlrabi" (TO PAGE 10)

Dear Music Teacher,

Could you please tell Lauren that listening to Beethoven records all night long will not help her better understand the violin?

Dear Miss Johnson,

I think there is something wrong with my piano. It keeps playing the wrong notes. Can you come check it?

Dear Mr. Stein,

I know that my son, Wesley, has only been studying the violin for two weeks, but maybe you could give us some advice on how we could plan for our family and friends?

Sincerely,
Mr. and Mrs. Williams

Dear Mrs. Craig,

Do you teach classical music with a rock and roll beat?

Thank you,
Phyllis Cobb

Dear Mrs. Goodwin,

I am sorry but after eight years, I can no longer keep Celine in the basement section of the choir.

Perhaps soon we will have an opening in the band section.

Yours truly,
Selden Harper

It seems that Nickerson can be tricky things. Why do some somnambulists nickname their own, and others do not? Harry Lord, author of the novel, claimed that this was a common phenomenon, but his explanation was too vague. The question, it seems, is one that we should all ask ourselves: Why do we use nicknames?

Elvis Traces Career

By DARIUS LIPPEK

ELVIS (HOLLYWOOD—Tues.)—These days, Elvis Presley is no longer the saucy, swaying shrimp of yesterday, when he could bring any crowd to its feet with a song or a smile.

But if you look closely, you'll see that he's still got it. His voice is still as rich and powerful as ever, and his movements still as graceful as they were when he first hit the music scene.

In addition to his music career, Elvis has turned his hand to acting. His latest film, "Gone with the Wind," has been a huge success, and he's already planning his next project.

Studio Keeps Glamor Of Hollywood Alive

By BICK DU BOIS

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) - I was at Universal Film Studios for a few hours recently and was surprised to see how much glamour remains there today.

The studios are still alive and well, and the Hollywood glamour is not dead. It is just not as visible as it once was in the past. The studios have changed, and the movies that are produced there now have a different look and feel.

But the glamour is still there, and it is waiting to be discovered. If you take the time to explore the studios, you will find a world of beauty and wonder that is just waiting to be discovered. So don't be afraid to step outside the norm and see what is waiting for you.

Novels Exercise Judgment, Reading Pace

By Doris Folsom

STEP 2: By Jerry Sande

The Library, New York City, is

Librarian, said: "We have been interested in using novels because we believe that they can foster critical thinking and encourage discovery and perspective."

However, there is another aspect to the issue of reading novels that is of equal importance: the practicality of using them in a library setting.

While novels offer a wealth of material for exploration and discussion, they also require considerable time to read and understand. This can be a challenge for libraries that are already stretched thin and

New Sounds on Captain Kangaroo
Jazz Invades Kindergarten

By LEONARD FEATHER
Stars of Wednesday morning at CBS-TV, entertainer of the television sets, the first question to the audience of the show is, "What is the title of the song you want to hear?"

When the children of the kindergarten class arrive at the class room, they have a song they want to hear on Captain Kangaroo. The idea grew out of a march regimental song by Bok Kangaroo. Several months ago by Billie Tyler, the newly composed tune is a joyous, animated number which will be popular for years to come. The music is a delightful blend of jazz and popular rhythms, with a strong beat and catchy rhythm.

A new feature on the show, "Jazz Invades Kindergarten," will introduce the children to the world of jazz music.
