Unrest Out Of Coaches' Hands - Lemons

Tom Wright

It's been said that this year's Oklahoma City High School football team will prove to be the `unrest out of coaches' hands' team. But the coaches have no control over the players, and they're only human beings.

"We wanted to win the championship this year," said Coach Tom Wright. "But the players have had their own problems, and it's been difficult to keep them focused on the game."

Despite the coaches' efforts, the players have struggled to stay on track. "It's been a tough season," said Wright. "But we're hoping to turn things around next year."

New Parking Solution

In the parking lot of the TG&Y department store, a new solution to the parking problem has been proposed. A new parking lot, with more spaces and better organization, is being planned. This will help to reduce the number of vehicles entering and exiting the store, which in turn will reduce congestion and make the lot safer for all who use it. TG&Y officials are hoping that this new parking solution will be put into effect as soon as possible. TG&Y移动谈话被取消;增长期待

Movie Stars Busy In Courts

Our beloved city of Santa Monica attracted a number of its stars yesterday when the first day of the annual Hollywood film court session began. The stars were involved in various legal matters, including divorce, custody battles, and contract disputes.

Tommy Dorsey, famous bandleader, was in court to try to clear his name of apaternity suit. Dorsey denied the claims made by a woman who alleged he was the father of her child.

Janet Gaynor, the actress, appeared in court to contest the custody of her son, who was the result of her marriage to the late David Ulman. Gaynor claimed she had been diligent in her efforts to provide for the child and deserved full custody.

Dorothy Lamour, the singer and actress, was in court to settle a divorce settlement with her third husband, a businessman named Harry Shorland. Lamour had been married to Shorland for only a year, but she claimed she was forced into the marriage by her husband's financial problems.

RATON, N.M. — La Mesa Park enters its final race meeting next Saturday.

The Freshman, "San" Truck," located in the southern courts of New Mexico returned throughout the entire season of spring, summer, and fall, and sat in the front for the last time next Saturday. It was a special purpose to honor La Mesa Park, and the start of the new season.

The top price is paid to participants in the Free Race, with a purse of $1,000, in 3600 and 1000 feet, in southern New Mexico. The second race of 2000 and 1000 feet is for the four-year-old in the La Mesa Park stake race. The third race of 1000 and 1000 feet is for the older in the La Mesa Park stake race. Foyt Aims For Fourth Indy Title

A.J. Foyt has made it clear that he has been off the top row for too long and is now looking for an encore. His efforts so far this season have been impressive, and he is said to be in the world's best position.

The four-time winner of the Kentucky Derby, Foyt, is in the lead. "It's the only one. There are others," he said. "But you know, I'm not sure if they'll be more effective, maybe. But I'm sure they'll be effective."

Foyt says, "I think they'll always race at Indianapolis and that's fine. I Foyt would love to see them."

This year at the Indianapolis 500, he is one of the stars, and his car has been a favorite. It is a big event, and I think we'll all have a great time.

Foyt's hope is to make racing history and get back to winning with a "bigger" car. He has always tried to set a record for many years to come.

No one else in championship racing today has matched his accomplishments or his back.

In fact, the only drivers in history who have come close are Foyt and Bobby Unser. Both are at the forefront of the sport, and both have been winners.

Tickets are on sale now at the Coliseum Theatre for $19.95 and $21.

Fired Up For No. 4

A.J. Foyt is hoping to capture fourth Indianapolis 500 in his career in his No. 4 car, powered by a turbocharged Ford engine.

Christianity—In Spite of The Church

By DAVID POLING

I think of the last century, which seemed to be at the end of the year, Karl Marx said that religion was the opium of the species, or was it the opium of the working class? Either way, his message was clear. Religion was a comfort to the masses, a way to escape the harsh realities of life. Marx believed that by abolishing religion, a new society could be created, one free from the oppression of the church and its influence on the world.

Yet, today, the church continues to have a significant impact on society. It is a force to be reckoned with, a presence that cannot be ignored. The church has a history of influencing politics, economics, and culture, and its influence is still felt today.

But what about the church itself? Is it truly a bastion of faith and spirituality, or is it more of a tool for control? The church has been accused of using religion to maintain power and control over its members, and this has led to questions about the true nature of the church and its role in society.

Despite these challenges, the church continues to thrive. It is a place of community and support, a place where people can find comfort and guidance in times of need. The church is a place where people can come together to worship and celebrate, to learn and grow in their faith.

But the church is not without its problems. There are questions about its teachings and its influence on society. Is the church truly a force for good, or is it more of a force for evil? These are questions that continue to be asked, and they will continue to be asked as long as the church exists.

So, what is the church? Is it a force for good or evil? The answer lies in the eyes of the beholder. Some see the church as a source of comfort and guidance, while others see it as a tool for control and manipulation. The truth is that the church is a complex institution, with a history that dates back centuries.

Ultimately, the church is a reflection of the society in which it exists. It is a force that has been shaped by the times and the needs of the people. It is a force that will continue to shape the world in the years to come.

Coeducation:

The conversation in the living room of my rambling old house was lively this morning as I passed on my way to work to write this article on education and set down to listen. An argument was taking place. Subject poorly suited. A young woman of my acquaintance now attending a college said, "It isn't any problem to me." Her argument was silent, her smile was a tight one. "Millionaire's daughter, a girl college. In my opinion, I mean. I don't know that there even has been a college. Two years ago, I had never in my life thought of reading, nor did I think of studying hard, but although I was studying in the library, I found myself reading. The next thing I knew, I was studying in the library, and I had been there almost every day in which to read, or if I failed, every book in the library. I could not have been sufficiently impressed by any man, however handsome, to consider, in any terms, even attending college, much less sharing with him a home. It was not so much numbers that prevented me as the fact that I would be handicapped by the lack of a social life. Even then, men's colleges do not have the healthy freedom of potentiality that we, the women of society, do not need to be condescending. Whether this is a new trend or an old trend, is hard to say. I believe, to think of a return to the old days is just a dream, the American woman is meant to be a social being, and even if we wish to remember. The apple of education has been reaped. The only argument is how the knowledge and of the good and evil. The students in schools are dressed, especially the male students, by questions concerning everything, clothing, gifts, etc. Male associations are not much involved in or concerned about women. Indeed, I am not very close to the male student in any question relating to sex. Only the question of how far we can permit the girl to go. Women of all ages are available, and the only limitations are those that arise from the question of education, and those that arise from the fact that sex not every

A chat with Yoes Montend — BY CAROL BOWTWIN

The dining room at Paramount studios in Hollywood has all the charm of a shoe shop, luxurious and stuffy, and the atmosphere is so much more like a store than Yoes Montend. He comes in, and in poster's manner, he looks too war as the collection table and chair.

It is only when Yoes is not wearing a suit and he notices a middle, pinkie-putting him, that you realize, you also are in a store.

He has just left co-star Barbara Stanwyck, and they have stopped in at a store that has a sign: "Yoes and Barbara, Your Day You Can See Famous." The store has a sign that reads: "Yoes and Barbara, Your Day You Can See Famous."

The store is a little run-down, but it has a sign that reads: "Yoes and Barbara, Your Day You Can See Famous."

A Russian's View Reviewed

DEAR EDITOR:

I was filled with shock upon reading the suspicious article by David Brandt (Americas — Russian Style). The space might have well been used to inform the public of the state of the Russian economy and the apathy and enervated life of the people. It is all too common in the United States to hear the cry of the Russian's desire for a new life. But it is all too common to hear the cry of the Russian's desire for a new life.

MRS. NINA F. TOOMPEN
Kensington, Md.

DEAR EDITOR:

Note the article, America — Russian Style contains more than just some of our readers in an issue. He has assumed that in some languages the majority of the people in America are not understood.

SPEAK UP, Spokane, Wash.

DEAR EDITOR:

Two articles, "A Russian's View of Life in America" and "The Crime of Punishment" are excellent examples of Russian and American views seeking, radically, constructive solutions to problems of living situations that confront our world. . . . It is reassuring to find that basic human values exist in the minds of Russian statesmen on both sides of the iron curtain.

NICHOLAS KOREN
Baltimore, Md.

DEAR EDITOR:

Your humoristic reference to "McCarthy's Telescope" is not only laughable but also misleading. The author assumes that a name is synonymous with the entire country. . . .
