Birthday Milestone Sends Dad To Bed

By BETTY CANBY

FATHER'S DAY may not be a major holiday, but it is a special day in the lives of many people. For one thing, it is a time to remember and celebrate the men who have made a difference in our lives.

It all started when my husband, who is now 50 years old, was in his early 20s. He had just been drafted into the army and was going to be stationed in a place he had never been before. The idea of being away from home and the people he loved was daunting. He was nervous and excited at the same time.

We had been planning a trip to Europe for a long time, but now it looked like he wouldn't be able to go. The thought of missing out on this opportunity was crushing. I tried to console him, telling him that he would have plenty of adventures once he got there.

The day before he was supposed to leave, we decided to have a surprise birthday party for him. We invited all his friends and family and decorated the house with streamers and balloons. We had a cake and ice cream, and I even made him his favorite lasagna.

As we sat around the table, eating and laughing, I looked at my husband and noticed a spark in his eye. He was really enjoying himself. I couldn't believe how much he was looking forward to this trip. I realized then that this wasn't just a birthday party; it was a way to make sure he had a good time.

When he got to Europe, he had a fantastic experience. He met new people, saw new sights, and learned a lot about himself. He came back home even more confident and adventurous.

Since then, Father's Day has become a special day for us. We always make sure to plan something special for him, and he always looks forward to it. It's a reminder of how much we love him and the impact he has had on our lives.

‘Tape King’ Leaves Trail of Splendor

By GEORGE HARRISON

LONDON—Mr. B. B. Demarest, who has been in the tap business for 30 years, has broken new ground. He has opened a new store at 161, Oxford Street, London, where he stocks a complete line of tap-books, including the latest models, with prices ranging from 50 cents to $10. The store is conveniently located near the Piccadilly Circus, and the manager of the store is Mr. J. H. B. Demarest. The store hours are Monday to Saturday, 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Mr. Demarest is well-known in the London tap business, and has been a member of the London Tap Manufacturers’ Association for many years. He has always been active in the promotion of the tap business, and has been a pioneer in the development of the tap-book. Mr. Demarest is also the owner of a tap-manufacturing plant in the United States, where he produces a line of tap-books that is sold in many countries around the world.

Mr. Demarest is married, and has two children. He lives in a large house in the suburbs of London, and is a member of the local tap-manufacturing association. He is a man of many interests, and is active in various charitable organizations.

From Los Angeles Times

EVERYONE HAS had the sense of a day lost; simply vanished from the calendar. You wake up on Monday thinking it is Sunday.

It’s a dreadful feeling, as if you had grown two days older in 24 hours. A day has blown away, uncounted, and been lost forever in the void, or whatever time goes. It is like that device in the old movies, where the wind blows the pages off a calendar, to indicate the passage of time.

But recently I got one day back. It was a transcendent experience. I had taken two weeks’ vacation to get some home work done. I had been working hard; so hard, apparently, that I thought I had taken me three days to do what I had actually done in two.

I WOKE UP on Wednesday thinking it was Thursday, a day on which I was committed to several chores. It was not a feeling that would go away. Every nerve and cell said it was Thursday.

The clock radio went on at 6 a.m. and I lay there listening to the news and weather, contemplating the busy day ahead. Then I heard the announcer say – “The temperature is 63 deg. at 6:30 a.m. This Wednesday morning in Los Angeles.”

Funnily, I thought, this announcer telling thousands of half-asleep people it was the wrong day. What havoc that might cause in people’s lives.

I GOT UP and made coffee and dressed. When my wife got up I told her about the announcer’s error. “Well, it is Wednesday,” she said.

“No, It’s Thursday.”

Shocked at me, she said: “It’s Wednesday.”

I got the paper off the doorstep and looked at the deadline: Wednesday. Nothing else would have convinced me.

MY MOOD changed. The day’s burdens lifted from my shoulders like big dark clouds and flew away. It was exhilarating. I was young. I was free. Life for once had relented and given me a whole day back.

I had managed to get off time’s non-stop train at a pleasant station in the country, with my ticket stamped for a 3-hour layover. The pressure of time at my back, pushing me through the week like a wind, was gone.
