God, Man, and Outer Space

An interview with Billy Graham

■ The United States is deeply committed to various space programs. We have spent many billions of dollars on our space programs. Our space science, our LM (Lunar Module), will almost certainly be worth its weight in gold. Tom Wilt: asked the Rev. Billy Graham about his views concerning the space race and what he believes is God's will for man today.

TW: Do you feel that our space program is a reflection of the will of God? Does man really have any business in space?

GRAHAM: The Bible contains many references to space, although the word "space" is not used or even mentioned. The first verse of Genesis says, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." Though there is no mention of the universe, God then created man "in his image, in the image of God, created He him; male and female created He them." In other words, man was created to maintain the superiority of his own love, compassion, and wisdom. This verse is the foundation of all the rest of man's purpose.

GRAHAM: We have come to understand that the universe is vast, beyond our comprehension. The term "space" lies naked and unbound. But as the universe is vast, so is our understanding. Man has come to understand that he is finite, that he is a part of the universe, and that he is responsible for his actions.

TW: What of the view of some scientists who say that the man is an accidental byproduct, that the man is not God's will?

GRAHAM: I have many scientists who maintain this position, namely, that every scientific discovery leads to a greater dependence on God. Only with God's help can we understand the universe. We must work and cooperate with scientists, but we must also remember that we are not alone in our search for knowledge.

GRAHAM: Christians have the primary duty of loving God and living within the boundaries of the universe. The Bible encourages us to explore the universe, but we must also remember that our actions are a reflection of our faith.

TW: How can we be sure that our efforts are in line with God's will for man?

GRAHAM: Christians should be guided by the principles of the Bible. The Bible provides a framework for our actions and decisions. We must remember that our actions are a reflection of our faith and that our actions should be guided by the principles of the Bible.

What kind of people buy a new Pontiac at this time of year?

How can we encourage our children to pursue their passions?

Smart people. Very smart people. The ones who know what they want in a car and what to get it. They want style. And they know Pontiac Catalina's style will stay in style year after year. And that's why people who really do it...
The Age of the Anti-

There's a new trend in the world of anti-war movements, a diatribed against war that is sweeping across the country. This new movement has prompted many people to reconsider their views on the issue.

On a recent afternoon at a downtown office building in Los Angeles, a group of activists gathered to discuss their plans. Among the attendees were members of the Young Patriots and the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies.

"We're tired of being used as pawns in a game that benefits only a few," said one activist. "We want to take control of our own lives and make decisions that affect our future."

The group decided to organize a march and rally on the day of the election to raise awareness about their cause.

Everybody's talking about it.

The term "campaign" has been revitalized, with candidates vying for the votes of an increasingly disillusioned electorate.

The media has been saturated with political advertisements, campaign rallies, and debates. The candidates are fighting for every vote, leaving no stone unturned in their efforts to win.

The stakes are high, and the consequences of the election are far-reaching.

"We're in a time of great uncertainty," said one political analyst. "The outcome of this election could determine the course of our country for the next four years."

The activists are determined to make their voices heard.

"We're not going to let them ignore us," said another activist. "We're going to be heard, no matter what it takes."

The campaign season is in full swing, and the outcome is anyone's guess.

"It's going to be a tough fight," said a campaign manager. "But we're not going to back down. We're going to fight for what we believe in, no matter what."
Woody's Back

Woody Herman is back. Who's Woody Herman? Ask your mother or grandmother. During the 30s, 40s, and 50s, he was one of the most successful bandleaders in the history of big band music. But in recent years, he has been nearly forgotten. Now, he's back, and he's bringing with him a new generation of fans.

When Woody Herman first started his band, it was during the heyday of swing music. He was one of the first to introduce swing to a wider audience, and his band quickly became a sensation. But as the 50s gave way to the 60s, his popularity waned. He tried to adapt to the changing times, but his music didn't resonate with the new generation.

Recently, however, Woody Herman has made a comeback. His new album, "Back in the Saddle Again," has received critical acclaim, and his concerts have been packed with fans old and new. "It's like I'm back in the day," says Herman, "the music means so much more to me now than it did then."

Woody Herman's return is just one example of how the music business is changing. As the old guard passes, new artists are taking the stage and bringing new life to classic music. It's a exciting time for fans of all ages.

If you opened a can of frozen orange juice this morning, disposed of a baby, bought a skirt, or set your hair, the chances are that you may have used one of the new kinds of tape.

Plastic tape is now being used to seal cases of some food products, including frozen orange juice. You merely peel the tape to open the case. Disposable disposables that are closed with tape (Kleenex), are being used in several makers areas by Kindred-Clark, and new tapes designed especially for homes and for hair styling were recently put on the market.

The new iu-on-beam tape promises to have a lot more use than just shortening skins. Called Drive Touch Witty, the tape is actually a strip of thin plastic bonding set. You place it between the two layers of fabric that you want to stick, and simply press it together. Stainless-steel house, you can use it to apply mirrors or attach appliances and items. Re-Rollhill can be made by taping silicon to a cloth backing fabric.

Transparent tape has long been used by women to set bobby pins, false nails, and short the ends. Now a special Hair Set Tape has been marketed by the company, the makers of Scotch brand tapes.

The new tape is pink and has paper edges so that it looks very feminine. It is made to stick to the skin and comes out easier than transparent tape. The company says that it prevents Formula Carnau design some styles that can be set with their tape (see photos)

These tapes now give you a very small picture of what's been going on in the tape industry. According to some industry officials, there are now up to 10 different kinds of tape that have some type of adhesive on them, besides the two we consider non-adhesive, such as the magnetic tape used in tape recorders. Many of these tapes are made for industry or for very specific problems—such as the end of a roll (top to bottom) tapes used on space blankets. There are a lot of tapes for you that you might not be aware of.

SEX EDUCATION: Healthy or Harmful?

sex education was corrupting their children and destroying the moral fabric of society. In one of the school board meeting, a number of parents were at a meeting of the school board, where the matter of sex education was discussed. A majority of the board was opposed to sex education, but a minority, who were parents of students attending the school, supported it. The debate was hot and intense, with parents on both sides expressing their concerns.

In an April school board meeting, a California school board was also debating the issue of sex education. The board was divided, with some members expressing concerns about the content and tone of the education, while others believed it was necessary to provide students with accurate information about sexuality.

A New Jersey school board had been accused of sexual misconduct and had been the subject of a lawsuit. The board is currently facing a complaint from a group of parents who have filed a lawsuit against the school district. The suit alleges that the board has been violating the rights of students by teaching sex education in an inappropriate manner.

The issue of sex education continues to be a contentious one, with parents and educators often at odds over the best approach to teaching students about sexuality. Some believe that sex education should be mandatory and comprehensive, while others argue that it should be voluntary and age-appropriate.

"...its aim is to produce adults who use their sexuality in mature and responsible ways."
SEX EDUCATION: Healthy or Harmful?
sex education was corrupting their children and demanded the course be abolished. In October the board held hearings on the issue, which ended in a 6-1 vote to retain the program. Teachers later boycotted classes and a protest against the program filled the auditorium. Parents who had attended the meeting were upset because they felt they had been misled by the school district.

The educators at Arroyo, shocked by the bitter attack, felt vindicated in knowing they weren't alone. In recent months, minorities of impassioned citizens' groups have risen up across the country to denounce sex education in schools, labeled perverts, pornography-crazed, and psychopathically harmful. Bills and resolutions to restrict or abolish it have reached the legislatures of Arkansas, Kentucky, Texas, New York, and Oklahoma, and even Congress.

A New Jersey school board has been accused of teaching sexual frankness and lack of moral restraints with so much finesse and tact it was allegedly planning to stop teen sex in Cougars. Teachers who have expressed concern about the course have been threatened with job loss and even violence. One teacher, who refused to teach the course, was suspended without pay. The American Medical Association, the National Education Association, and the National Education Association of the U.S. (NCEA) have issued reports opposing the course, calling it a "dangerous" and "misguided" program. The NCEA has called for the immediate withdrawal of the course and for the board to investigate the allegations of sexual misconduct.

In response, the school board has announced they will bring in experts to review the course and determine its appropriateness. The board has also stated they will not take any action against teachers who refuse to teach the course.

The issue of sex education continues to be a contentious one, with many people on both sides of the debate. It remains to be seen how this particular course will be handled and what the final outcome will be.
CREOLE CUISINE

By MYRA WALDO, TV's Food Editor

In the Reconstruction years following the Civil War, many African-American cooks adapted European and Middle Eastern cuisines to the rich Creole dishes—chicken and seafood gumbo, the spicy crawfish and oyster boil, and other delicacies of the New Orleans coterie.

To the contrary, in its own way, the Creole food of New Orleans remains unique, quite different from the culinary styles of the rest of the country. Located near an excellent source of fresh seafood and fish, the history and traditions of New Orleans are unsurpassed in their cuisine history. Especially significant in creating the famous Creole dishes of New Orleans is its location in the region for five centuries.

Here are several of the Creole dishes that are representative of the New Orleans cuisine:

Dear Editor:
Your article "Christianity - in Spirit of the Church" is excellent; timely; and factual. The world reacts to religious hypocrisy is indeed encouraging. While I believe in the importance of religion, I have no concept in organized Christianity.

John L. Johnson
Dallas, Tex.

Dear Editor:
It certainly points out clearly how many big churches are far off bases in not prevailing what should be their social work. When people prove materially, they forget God.

Tom S. Proctor
Buffalo, N. Y.

Dear Editor:
David Pilling proved his point again when he introduced the EDS Pulsar.

Granted that God is not confined to buildings, etc., it is in these buildings, etc., that He is revealed to us. The men of the Pulsar could not have created their own Bible if they had not been taught the Bible through their respective churches.

Dear Editor:
I look forward to sending church as most Christians do. Without a church there would be no computers in our lives. Believing that Tom Woreman is a big magazine, I hope that an article will be printed soon in opposition to Dr. Pilling.

Outside Space

(Know page 2) Graham: The Bible says, "The earth also is defiled with the wickedness of its inhabitants, and it shall be burned up." But this is only to make way for a new and wonderful age of unimaginable joy. This Age of Grace will usher in the glorious new beginning God has planned for us. Having given us a glimpse of that day," the Apostle John wrote, "And God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes: and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more curse; but the former things are passed away."

I.W.: Then why do we use our technology and our space so misguidedly as God's will?

Graham: God's will for man is the same at all times and in all places. It is simply that we be reconciled to Him. Once before, He used space to bridge the distance between Himself and men. He was being a great先 step in the heavens and revealed its meaning to three wise men from the East, who followed it to the little town of Bethlehem. And the world was changed.

As we use our resources in space, let us remember what happened 2,000 years ago and join our hearts in prayer, saying, "Even so, come again to our troubled planet, Thou Prince of Peace." 13
