Vietnam's Cam Ranh Bay Rivals U.S. Resorts

Easy Life Is Seldom Touched By War

The world outside of this small town is a very different place. Cam Ranh Bay, a U.S. naval base, is a symbol of the war in Vietnam. The base is a major center for the repair and maintenance of U.S. military equipment, and its presence is a constant reminder of the conflict.

Braniff brings Hawaii closer to Oklahoma City.

Fly Braniff to Dallas/Fort Worth. Then Braniff non-stop to Hawaii. Braniff all the way.

Then it's a flight (via the one plane to Dallas, another plane to Los Angeles, and still another if we go to Hawaii) over.

If you're all you'll get to Hawaii, that you pick up, and you land in Honolulu. Also, you'll get to Honolulu.

So come on! Braniff International has been flying the Pacific for years. And now we can do this, too.

Pot Users Find Status In Smoking

In Los Angeles, where many of the drugs are sold, there were about 10,000 pot smokers. They could smoke marijuana at will in the parks and on the beaches. The police did not interfere with them, and there were no reports of any trouble.

Pot users felt that they had a status in society. They felt that they were part of a subculture that was accepted by the majority of the population. They felt that they were free to enjoy their favorite drug without any interference from the authorities.

The police did not interfere with them, and there were no reports of any trouble.
