Blaze Guts Park Barn

A blaze started by an explosion destroyed the main building at Frontier City Thursday night and destroyed the Long Branch Saloon and Saloon Bar. District Fire Chief Ron Raybould said it was believed the fire had started in an exposition at the gas tank of the barn. He said the cause of the fire was unknown.

A maintenance worker who had just left the business rushed outside and turned on the water from the main fire hydrant. The building was saved from total destruction. All other buildings were damaged, the chief said, and the barn is located beside the rock face near the river.

City OKs Pay Study In Feud

By J. M. Borland

The Oklahoma City Council, in the wake of a threatened strike, appears to have rejected the idea of a pay study.

The council's action came after a group of sanitation workers gathered in the city to demand a raise in wages. The workers argued that they were not being paid enough to cover the cost of living.

Members of the city council said they were not interested in a pay study because they believed the workers were not properly functioning.

The city's fire department, however, has been discussing the issue of pay and wages for some time.

Buckley Sues For Million

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 — William J. Buckley, Jr., is offering to pay $1 million to anyone who can show that he is not the author of a satirical book, "The First Salvo," published by the University of Chicago Press.

Buckley, who is a conservative political commentator and author, has filed a libel suit against the university, alleging that the book contains false and defamatory statements about him.

The suit, filed in federal court in New York, seeks $1 million in damages. Buckley has also requested a jury trial.

Buckley said in a statement that he has been the target of "a coordinated and orchestrated campaign of lies and misinformation," and that he believes the university is behind the false allegations.

University officials have not commented on the lawsuit.

Son's Hair Shocks Minister

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 — Minister John Chase was shocked when he discovered that his son, a college student, had dyed his hair bright blue.

Chase, who is known for his conservative views, was quoted as saying, "I'm not sure what to make of this."

'In-Between' Out Of Touch

Dear Reader,

I'm not sure what to make of this. It's as if the world has changed, and I'm left behind. I can no longer keep up with the times. It's as if I'm an 'in-betweener.'

Dear Friend,

I don't want to feel disconnected from the world. I want to stay connected, even if it means changing my ways. Can you help me?

Sincerely,

WALL'S BARGAIN CENTER
Students To Get ‘Individualized’ Help, Training

ONE OKLAHOMA CITY school is likely to open the floodgates of help for its high school students. The school is the Oklahoma City Public Schools Career-Technical Center, where the curriculum is designed to meet the needs of students who may not be able to succeed in traditional high school settings.

The center’s goal is to provide individualized education programs for students who need extra help. The programs are designed to meet the unique needs of each student, whether they are struggling with academics, behavior issues, or other challenges.

The center offers a range of services, including academic tutoring, counseling, and social services. Students can receive help in a variety of subjects, including math, science, English, and social studies.

The school also offers vocational programs, which can help students gain skills and knowledge that can lead to employment. These programs include computer programming, digital media, and culinary arts.

The center is staffed with experienced teachers and counselors who are dedicated to helping students succeed. The school prides itself on its small class sizes, which allow for more personalized instruction.

If you’re interested in applying to the Oklahoma City Public Schools Career-Technical Center, you can find more information on their website. Applications are accepted on a rolling basis, so be sure to apply as soon as possible.
