The Oklahoma Journal

A well-dressed young man, a former Beret, was shot and killed yesterday in his apartment in the Green Beret complex in Washington, D.C. The victim, identified as John T. Beret, was found dead in his apartment at the intersection of 12th and F St., N.W., just after 10 p.m.

The attack occurred as Beret was returning home with his wife, whom he had met earlier in the evening. The couple was walking along 12th St. when they were confronted by a group of men, who pulled out handguns and opened fire. Beret was shot in the head and died instantly.

The investigation is ongoing, and no suspects have been identified. The incident is being handled by the Washington D.C. Police Department. The couple had been married for five years and had no children.

A neighbor who lived in the same building said that Beret and his wife had been living there for about a year and had been very quiet and private. The couple was often seen walking their dog in the neighborhood.

The victim's family members expressed shock and grief over the loss of their loved one. Beret was a respected businessman and was involved in several community organizations.

The family is seeking legal advice and is considering filing a lawsuit against the government for negligence.

TALKS COLLAPSE, STRIKE ON

Night Huddle Fails To Avert Refuse Strike

By PHILIP MORGAN AND PAUL CARLSON

The talks between the city and workers of the public works department collapsed in the early morning hours, and a possible strike was avoided.

The two sides met last night after the failure of the talks to come to an agreement.

The city offered a 10% wage increase to the workers, while the union asked for a 20% increase.

After the talks failed, the city said it would offer a 15% increase.

The union rejected the offer, saying it was not enough to meet the demands of its members.

Last night's talks were the fourth in a series of negotiations between the city and the union.

The city has already offered a 15% increase, which was rejected by the union.

The union has called for a strike if the talks fail to result in an agreement.

The city has threatened to sue the union if it goes on strike.

The talks are expected to continue today, with both sides vowing to keep fighting for the best possible deal.
