The idea of tapping into Bruce Voss's phone is not as unusual as it sounds. Many times in the past, Federal agents have tapped into someone's phone to gather intelligence. In fact, it is not illegal, even though it is a violation of privacy.

A "public relations" assistant to the federal prosecutor is constantly kept aware of any illegal activities that are going on in the area. This assistant, however, has no idea what to do with the information.

The assistant said that he had no idea why the federal department had not been able to talk to the public about the case.

"We have no idea what to do with the information," he said. "We're not sure if it's a criminal investigation or if it's a civil investigation."
