Greve Firm Denies Unfair Labor Practices
Sequoyah Officer Cites 'Political' Possibilities

An executive of Sequoyah Industries Inc. is accused by the firm of pressuring its employees to support a union. The firm is owned by Joseph Greve, a prominent Democratic County politician. Greve, who is also the mayor of the city of Sequoyah, has been charged with unfair labor practices.

Sequoyah Industries, a manufacturing firm, has been accused of unfair labor practices by the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB). The NLRB has accused the company of firing employees who have sought to form a union.

Greve, through his lawyer, has denied the allegations. He has said that the employees who were fired were not fired because they sought to form a union but because they were not performing up to the company's standards.

The NLRB has filed a complaint against the company, and a hearing is scheduled for next month. If the company is found guilty, it could face fines and have to reinstate the employees who were fired.

State's Parochial Schools Feel Bind

Catholic schools in Oklahoma are facing the burden of state regulation, which has been increased by the Oklahoma City Public Schools (OKCPS) and the State Board of Education (SBE).

Chairman Johnson, a member of the SBE, said that the state's parochial schools must comply with the same regulations as public schools. He cited the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, which upheld the Oklahoma law.

Johnson said that the Catholic schools must comply with the same regulations as public schools, but that they must also be able to provide a religious education.

Trio Alive, Red's Say

EVENING BULLETIN, Okla. — The Trio and Red's Say that they have been approached by the state to give a three-man show. The Trio has been offered $1,000 for the show.

Johnson said that the Trio and Red's Say are not the only Catholic schools that are facing the burden of state regulation. The state has also imposed regulations on other religious schools, such as the Jewish schools.

John Johnson, a member of the SBE, said that the state's regulations are necessary to ensure the quality of education in Oklahoma.
