Teens Need To Learn Responsible Drinking

By DR. WILLIAM W. GENTRY

A group of parents met to discuss the problem of teenage drinking.

MRS. A: I'm just worried about my son, Bob. He's 16 and he just keeps drinking.

MRS. B: My daughter, Judy, is 17 and she's been drinking since she was 15.

MRS. C: I can't believe that teenagers are drinking like that. It's just not right.

MRS. D: All of our kids are drinking, it seems. I think we need to do something.

MRS. E: I'm just glad I don't have a teenager. I wouldn't know what to do.

MRS. F: Yes, but what do we do about it? We can't just let them drink.

MRS. G: We need to find a way to help them understand the consequences of drinking.

MRS. H: I think we should start by setting a good example ourselves.

MRS. I: And we need to talk to our kids about the dangers of drinking.

MRS. J: They need to learn to make responsible choices.

MRS. K: I agree. We need to teach them about the legal consequences of drinking.

MRS. L: And the health consequences.

MRS. M: Yes, and the social consequences.

MRS. N: We need to help them understand that drinking is not a solution to their problems.

MRS. O: We need to show them that there are other ways to cope with stress.

MRS. P: And we need to be honest with them about the risks.

MRS. Q: I think we need to start by having a discussion about what we expect of them.

MRS. R: And what we don't expect.

MRS. S: We need to set clear rules and consequences.

MRS. T: And we need to follow through.

MRS. U: We need to be there for them when they need us.

MRS. V: We need to give them the support they need.

MRS. W: We need to help them develop healthy coping mechanisms.

MRS. X: We need to be their role models.

MRS. Y: We need to be their friends.

MRS. Z: We need to be their teachers.

MRS. A: I think we need to start now.

White Man Gets Another Chance

Nearly everyone agrees that the Indian is as much an American as any other American. Yet, in recent years, the government has taken steps to remove the last vestiges of Indian culture, such as the reservation system. Yet, the government has also provided opportunities for Native Americans to succeed in modern society.

There are many reasons why Native Americans have not succeeded as much as other Americans. One reason is that they have been historically disadvantaged. They have been subjected to forced assimilation, discrimination, and poverty. Another reason is that they lack access to the same opportunities as other Americans, such as education and employment. Yet, Native Americans have made significant progress in recent years. They are more likely to have a college degree than ever before.

The University of Oklahoma has been accused of bias in the handling of a teaching assistant's complaint. The assistant had alleged that the professor had discriminated against him because of his race. The university denied the charges, saying that it has a policy of neutrality in such matters. However, many have criticized the university for its handling of the case, saying that it failed to provide a fair hearing.

South African Mum On City Strike

South African Mum On City Strike

By STEVE DREYER

The strike, which has been organized by the National Union of Mineworkers, began Monday and is expected to continue for at least two weeks. The union has criticized the government's handling of the situation and is demanding better working conditions, increased wages, and an end to racial discrimination.

The strike has caused disruptions in the country's economy, with many businesses closing and transport systems affected. Authorities are urging people to remain calm and avoid demonstrations, while the union is calling for a nationwide strike.

The strike has also sparked protests and demonstrations in other parts of the country, with workers and students joining in solidarity.

The government has threatened to use force if necessary to maintain order, but so far, has not taken such action.

In addition to economic impacts, the strike has raised concerns about the country's stability and future. The government has been criticized for its handling of the situation, with some calling for leadership changes.

The strike has also drawn international attention, with many countries expressing concern and offering support to the strikers.

The strike is expected to continue for several weeks, with negotiations between the union and the government ongoing.

Governor, Ambassador Meet

In another development, an ambassador from a neighboring country visited the city to discuss the situation with local officials. The ambassador expressed concern about the strike and called for a peaceful resolution.

Several meetings were held between the ambassador and local leaders, with both sides committing to working towards a solution.

The ambassador also met with community leaders and organizations, listening to their concerns and offering support.

The city has been working closely with the government to address the strike and ensure public safety and security.
