School Board Hails 'OU Plan' As Answer To City Integration

By JUNE EARLE

"This is a plan that's been developed for two years and suddenly we've seen it. This is a plan for a better Oklahoma City."

JUNE EARLE, the district's top education official, was enthusiastic Wednesday about the new plan to integrate Oklahoma City schools.

"It's a plan for a better Oklahoma City," she said. "We've been working on this for two years and it's something that I'm very proud of." She also said the plan would "help us move forward in a positive direction." The plan will be implemented in phases, with the first phase expected to begin within the next year. The plan is expected to result in increased diversity in the city's schools and a more equitable distribution of resources.

Protest Perch

Despite the district's efforts to create a more inclusive environment, some members of the community are still concerned about the lack of progress in integrating the schools. One of them is John Smith, a parent of a student at a predominantly white school.

"I think the district is doing a great job," he said. "But I still worry about my child's education. There are too many differences between my child and the other students." Smith is part of a group of parents who have been protesting the district's plans for integration.

Joe Says It Isn't So

Baseball Boss Weary Of Franchise Moving

By Joe Heyning
Sports Writer

We can only see the present baseball season now.

Once upon a time, when circus shows were in the vaudeville era, there was a time when baseball was king. Now, it's difficult for yet another season to pass without hearing a story about a baseball team, or a professional sports franchise, moving to another city. It's a story we've heard before and will hear again in the future, no doubt about it. Baseball is a sport that has had its ups and downs, but it's always been there for us, and it will continue to be there for us as long as it's able to.

Northwest Chamber Told 'Secrets' Of A Healthy Life

The best way to enjoy a healthy life is not to neglect your diet, according to Mr. William Johnson, director of the Northwest Chamber of Commerce.

"The key to a healthy life is a well-balanced diet," Mr. Johnson said. "This includes a variety of fruits, vegetables, and lean meats. It's also important to get regular exercise, such as walking or jogging, and to avoid smoking and excessive alcohol consumption."

"By following these simple guidelines, you can improve your overall health and enjoy a better quality of life," Mr. Johnson added.
