Do Cats Carry Leukemia?

NEW YORK (UPI) - A national group of researchers reported today that a variety of experimental methods are currently being used to study the possibility of leukemia in cats. The study, conducted by a team of scientists at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, has been underway for several months and is expected to provide valuable insights into the disease.

The researchers, led by Dr. John P. O'Donnell, have been using both human and animal models to study the disease. They have found that cats appear to be particularly susceptible to the disease, with a high incidence of leukemia reported in certain breeds.

The implications of this study are significant for the field of medical research, as it may help to shed light on the underlying causes of leukemia in cats and potentially other mammals. The study results will be published in a forthcoming issue of the Journal of Experimental Medicine.

In other news, the Oklahoma Journal has reported on the recent developments in the ongoing arms control talks between the United States and the Soviet Union. The talks have been characterized by a mix of cooperation and tension, with both sides seeking to secure favorable terms for their respective nations.

Estonian opposition leader opposes plan

In a recent interview, Estonian opposition leader Tõnis Reilai has expressed his opposition to the government's proposed land reform plan. Reilai, who is a member of the Estonian Social Democratic Party, argued that the plan would result in the consolidation of land ownership, leading to increased inequality and social unrest.

Reilai's concerns are shared by many in Estonia, where the issue of land reform has been a contentious one for many years. The government's plans have faced resistance from various segments of society, including farmers and rural communities, who fear that the changes could have negative implications for their livelihoods.

In response, the government has defended the plan, arguing that it is necessary to address the legacy of the Soviet occupation and improve the economic conditions of Estonia.

The ongoing discussions on this issue will continue to be closely watched by observers, as they may have implications for the stability and development of Estonia.

NEW MODELS

1970 MOBILE HOMES

New rolling into Dick Tiger's Mobile Home Factory outlet, located at 7101 S. Shields in Oklahoma City.

Big plans are underway for the official opening of Oklahoma's newest and largest mobile home factory outlet.

Dick Tiger is a subsidiary of W.P. "Bill" Atkinson Industries, Inc.

Bill Atkinson says:

"You are invited to a sneak preview of these beautiful NEW homes . . . and you will see why 82% of all homes sold this past year in the $15,000 and under price were homes on wheels."

"You will find more homes, more different styles and floor plans at Dick Tiger than you would normally expect to find at one location. Come out today or this weekend and browse around as our guests."

The beautiful mobile home featured on this page was manufactured by the Tidwell Industries, Inc., Hoxieville, Alabama, one of our exclusive suppliers.

Extra spacious bathroom, double lavatories with double mirrors, deluxe vanity, extra closet space, single decorator shower and sliding doors.

Sheep carpet throughout except kitchen and small bedroom, beautiful Cathedral ceiling with exposed beams, featuring indirect lighting, conventional home type full size furniture, and unusually well tailored floor length drapes. "This is the most beautiful hardwood paneling on the walls I have ever seen" in the opinion of most women.

Deluxe furniture in master bedroom with king size bed, large closet space.

Other outstanding features in this 1970 featured home are:

- 6 x 11 bay window in front door
- Mason type door and storm door
- Full 8' floor with double insulation
- Roofing 1' plus, metal with tongue for strength, quietness, and end insulation (10 degrees colder in summer)
- Prepared blocks on embossed type aluminum exterior for added strength and attractiveness.
