By SALLY CLEWS

The rapidly expanding public school system in Oklahoma City is causing a conflict between state and local authorities.

The state has been funding the expansion of the school system, but the local authorities have been pushing for more funding.

The conflict has reached a point where the state and local authorities are at loggerheads.

The state wants to limit the expansion of the school system, while the local authorities want to expand it further.

The conflict is likely to continue and could have far-reaching implications for the future of the school system in Oklahoma City.

Ageless John Wayne Still Riding Hard

By DON FICE

NEW ORLEANS — John Wayne, the actor who has reigned over the kingdom of celluloid cowboys for almost 40 years and spent millions of minutes in the saddle, has left the Western country, yet he's not a bit different in person from the way he was when he was a youth. He stands six foot, 2½ inches tall and weighs 210 pounds. He is a confirmed vegetarian and is a first-class athlete, playing tennis and boxing outside of pictures. He is a silent movie star and now a talkie, but he still likes to drive his big black Morgan sports car and ride his black horse.

John Wayne is a cowboy in life as well as in the movies, and he has been an actor for almost 40 years. He has been in over 200 movies, mostly Westerns, and has won numerous awards for his acting. He has also been a successful business man, owning several movie studios and a large ranch in Arizona.

Two Strong Men United At Last

Multi-talented Clark Gable, left, on a former California ranch, and Tycoon John Wayne, who once operated a movie studio, are united against a common enemy, Mexican bandits, in the Western, which was written by Howard W. Koch, played by John Wayne and was directed by Howard Hawks. It was a great part, and they didn't make it go as well as they did in the earlier part of the year. They were supposed to be going out west this month, and they didn't want to do it. It was a great part, and they didn't make it go as well as they did in the earlier part of the year. Scotland Common To Pair

By JAMES ROBINSON in New York

In tight focus

Miss O'Hara's book is a slight and short work, really more about business than about the law. The story is presented in a linear fashion, with each major character given equal time. The book is divided into three parts: the first part covers the early years of the firm, including its growth and expansion. The second part focuses on the current state of the firm, including its status and reputation in the community. The third part covers the final years of the firm, including its decline and eventual closure. The book is written in a straightforward style, with a focus on the characters and their actions. Overall, the book is a well-written and engaging work of fiction, and it would be a great choice for readers interested in the world of business.

TW interviews the man in charge of the 1707 census

The time is near for every American to head up the census. We have been doing it every 10 years since 1790. The average citizen will be our subject. Some people have become concerned that the census is an invasion of privacy. But the Big Brother government is keeping on them, and that the information they supply might be disclosed to other public or private agencies.

Time West's Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans, whose department has jurisdiction over the Census Bureau, has his answers to these criticisms. Here are his replies to five questions on the subject:

TW: What is the purpose of the census? Why do we have to bother with taking one?

Secretary Stans: The federal census is one of the most important sources of national and local knowledge. The Census Bureau is the only government agency that can systematically collect and publish data on a vast array of topics, from population and housing to employment and income. This information is used by businesses, governments, and individuals to make informed decisions.

TW: What about privacy concerns? The Census Bureau collects information that is valuable for public use. The data collected is confidential and is used only for statistical purposes.

Secretary Stans: The Census Bureau takes the confidentiality of the information it collects very seriously. The data is collected in a way that protects the privacy of individuals and is only used for statistical purposes. Confidentiality is protected by law, and the Census Bureau is bound by strict legal and ethical standards to ensure the confidentiality of the data.

TW: How do you ensure the accuracy of the census? The Census Bureau uses a variety of methods to ensure the accuracy of the data collected. This includes using a variety of data sources, conducting quality control checks, and using statistical methods to estimate the population size.

Secretary Stans: The Census Bureau uses a variety of methods to ensure the accuracy of the data collected. This includes using a variety of data sources, conducting quality control checks, and using statistical methods to estimate the population size. Accuracy is a top priority for the Census Bureau, and we work hard to ensure that the data we collect is as accurate as possible.

A TRIBUTE

+ A Rachel Carson National Wildlife Refuge may soon be a reality, thanks to Congress and Time West readers.

The new United States National Wildlife Refuge is in the making, among suitable refuges for the honor of the late author's devotion. It's one of many species that would likely be threatened unless it were protected. The plan to create the refuge was unveiled by Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., who chairs the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. The refuge would be named in honor of Carson, an environmentalist and author of the bestselling book "Silent Spring." Carson was instrumental in the fight to protect the environment and is known for her work in raising public awareness about the impacts of pesticides.

Can Our Cities Survive?

The major purposes of urban America today is putting down their hands. For they are doing this in the belief that this is a better way of life. There is something in this statement because every year, as he grows older, I come to feel that my efforts were not properly appreciated by the general public. We do not mean that we have been doing everything correctly, but I think that the City Hall and other public officials have been doing something to improve the City's situation. I concluded that I should not continue the same course, but try to do something to improve the situation. My motives for not running for a fifth term were, however, much more complex, involving at least four other factors:

1. The continued cultivation of a weak mayor system that deeply limits the mayor's authority.
2. My growing conviction that city government is playing a diminishing role in shaping the city's future because, increasingly, the important urban needs are met by a complex of centralized and fragmented authorities.
3. An opposition mayor on the city council, who was articulate and able to lead the mayor's office, which had become more and more to the public and a shift into a more broadly for our wholesale change of past and emphasis.
4. And, finally, the feeling that the many activities of the office were devolving upon whatever impetus we might have had, and that it would be more productive in such a city that did not have to invent history or change any one time.

But the major factor was the growing sense that the mayor's office was not understood, appreciated, or fully supported.

The mayor of a city like Minneapolis — a city of remarkable civic pride and strong sense of community, the mayor is a symbol of the city's values and aspirations. He is the leader of the city, the voice of the people, the representative of the city. He is the mayor of the city.

I have been in office for more than 30 years as a mayor of Minneapolis. I have never been the mayor of a city in public office, no demanding physically or administratively as stimulating as mayorship.

Almost every day in City Hall the mayor faces problems that are beyond his control. His office is filled with policy-making decisions — both large and small, and he is not under any constraints of time or space. The mayor is expected to be in the office for 12 to 16 hours a day, followed by 12 to 14 hours of work at home and on weekends. This is a job for a person who is not only a politician but a professional.

Can Cities Survive?

(From page 4) - taller and without adequate sources of revenue granted by the state. Housing, educational, employment costs at the present rates, with housing at least priority.

My friends tell me it's taken courage to take them on the minds of the people. My friends tell me that a real city is a city. I don't believe that it is impossible to run a major city during such days of turmoil with any semblance of government as a stepping stone to another position. It's simply a matter of learning. When I went to Washington in the summer of 1943 to testify in front of the Senate, the Senate, as I know, to be the real executive of the city. I immediately lost a considerable amount of support - even the Senate papers. But time has proved that I was right.

We had racial discrimination in New York and in the Boulevard section in the same manner of 1946 - at the same time we were in the throes of a race.

We had several days of violence in the Dixie Hills section in June, 1949. And we had a no-travel policy, a no-train strike in September, 1949.

But with each day, city officials and black politicians and ministers everywhere to work, the problems, and the city grew to the recognition of the citizens.

Our city is always tried to be the stronghold of all potential, irrespective of the blackness of it. And the blackness of it is to the people, as it is to the people, as it is to the people, as it is to the people, as it is to the people, as it is to the people, as it is to the people.

What have I decided to step down after eight years? The answer is complete and difficult to explain. I have either completed the tasks I sought to achieve, or am still working on the way to achieving them. This, coupled with the know that a wealth of our forces and our labor and a certain amount of change in the world, I know that I only should not weep and be sad. In this, I know the city, the city in its people, the city in its citizens.

Looking ahead, I see no more complexities than in the past. Racial discrimination in schools, public places, and in the police is still present and there was only one simple answer. But our idealistic young people, better educated and - changed by the society, my friends, too young to be young.

Although there are still some who believe in the United Way.

Commonly called just "Hg", it is in solution of protein (made from Namurne), the conscious human algae that dominates us.

Although individual doctors in the U.S. and Europe use it, the medical authorities of the West continue to reject Hg. In 1968, after articles on Dr. Adan and his drug appeared in several magazines, the American Medical Association printed a reply by Ralph Lee Smith called "Anti-Peyonian Foundation of Youth."

Smith wrote, "These articles mention something that is controversial, not because it is wrong but because it is right. The great majority of elderly persons who condition seemingly has been significantly improved by protein treatment. There is little doubt that such articles would help people see the merits of human algae - hope which, according to the results of the best scientific studies made to date, may or may not be fulfilled."

But Dr. Adan continues to attract patients who want to be young. "Lillie G. Shaw, age 92, of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, has taken Hg since 1970, "I am not a scientist, I am not a doctor. I am not a medical professional. I am simply a patient who has taken Hg for almost 10 years. I feel better, I am stronger, I have more energy."

Endocrinologist Albert C. Stamos of New York City, former professor of the hormonal therapy in Paris, also says, "My patients are happy, they are better. They have more energy. They have less fatigue. They have better skin. They have better hair. They have more sex."

Dr. Adan's life has been described as "miraculous" and his clinic as "paradise" for the elderly. "I believe that Hg is the answer to the problem of aging," Dr. Adan says. "It is a natural substance that is produced by the body, and it is the only substance that can replace the lost of nutrients that come with aging."

The drug consists of a combination of plant extracts, minerals, and vitamins that are said to improve the body's ability to produce energy. It is administered orally and is said to reverse the effects of aging, including wrinkles, gray hair, and loss of strength.

Dr. Adan is a controversial figure in the medical community. Some doctors believe that the drug works, while others believe that it is a dangerous and ineffective treatment. Despite this, the demand for Hg remains high, and patients continue to travel to Russia for treatment.

Football
Is a Big Laugh

"Then there's the college player who studied a foreign language—English."

BY BOB CURRAN

Having spent many years on the rubber-chicken circuit—most of the funniest between early December and late April—I have heard hundreds of warm stories told by hundreds of men. And most of the jokes come from the world of football.

I am not sure why this is, but I assume it has something to do with the nature of the game. Football coaches have to recruit constantly, and the recruiting season forms them to resent and often speak at close distances. And as the demand for rifles increases.

One of the popular sayings:

"If you're going around the circuit these days with a night watchman, coach the way he's going to be on the next day. And when he goes to bed, his wife will say, 'Gosh, that fellow's hot.'"

"My idea," said Lombardi, "is to make you all into Vinitzians."

A coach who has the reputation in college football that Lombardi has in the pros is Paul Bryant of Alabama. One story he tells about his trips to Texas AM is that he used to pay for running in a sports day. With just a few minutes to play, he had a score lead and a chance to win. But he was too tired to go into the game, so he kicked into his heels and got his quarterback called for a flag.

The upcoming game rivaled the one for the goal. The All-American comes in and hits him on the second or third game. The players all go for the goal. And the quarterback says, "Oh, my God, this is going to be a big game..."

One of the best in the sports world came from the game when Houston and Texas A&M met. Houston won 15-0, but the game was played in the Cotton Bowl. In the beginning, the game got off to a slow start, but once the teams got going, the game was a见それを議論する必要がある世界の現状を

Can your child read these words?
napkin  fuzzy
mitry  liquid
chicken  whisper
punch  zigzag

Your child will learn to read these and more than 200 others after working with the very first record of The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

Try out this Phonics Course FREE for TWO WEEKS with your child in your own home—without risking a penny. Mail the coupon below.

If your child is a poor reader, if he has not been able to keep up with his classmates, if he can't spell or write well, this course can help him. Many parents have seen that complete readiness up to a full year's grade in reading is just six weeks with the Sound Way to Easy Reading.

As soon as your child starts plugging the records and using the charts of The Sound Way to Easy Reading you will know why it works so well. It takes the mystery out of learning to read because it teaches your child by the phonetic method (the method by which most parenets learned to read years ago).

Teaches with records

With this course your child discovers that letters have sounds. When he starts to sound each letter aloud as he learns to spell himself saying the word, he's reading. The course will turn the sound of the letters of the alphabet to your child's delight. By the time he completes the first record (about two weeks for the average child) he'll know the sound of each letter. After finishing all four records he has been taught all the basic phonics sounds. Once he knows these sounds he can read up to 80% of the words in a book. The course includes at least one record of all the words your child will need in his reading of regular books. He needs only his own reading materials. None are included with this course. This course can be used with any reading materials your child uses.

Tested and Proved is a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in reading ability after only 50 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading. This four-month-long study involving 134 pupils in Grade 4 at Chaloner School showed that pupils who worked with the Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading ability and spelling over the control group. Don't let it all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read.

Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp the "look-and-say" method taught in most schools today. Yet, many educators insist that at least 60% of our children must have formal training in phonics—they will never master reading without it.

Help Your Child Now

So don't wait for your poor reader to reach high school before realizing the importance of a reading program which actually works. Send for a free copy of The Sound Way to Easy Reading today. You'll change your child's attitude toward school—and his sense of failure into joy of success. Try it free for two weeks. You need no money—just mail coupon.
