NAACP Lawyer Attacks City's School Plan

BY JANE CARVER

John Walker, Little Rock lawyer and NAACP attorney representing Negro high school students, made the statement from his Little Rock office that he and his attorney's plans for the legal case have been approved by the school board. He is not available for comment on the legal situation.

If the state court rules against the city school system, the NAACP attorney is expected to file a petition for a rehearing.

Walker is expected to be available for his appearance on the board of education on Monday morning.

The statement was made in a letter from Walker's office to the school board.

Lawyers Hold U.S. Official

WASHINGTON (AP) - The city of Little Rock today arrived at a settlement after nearly a month of negotiations with the city school board in an apartheid-like case involving the NAACP and the city's African-American students.

The settlement, reached after weeks of negotiations, will allow the city school board to continue with its plans for the new school year.

The settlement agreement calls for the city school board to fund a new school in the area and to provide transportation for students.

A City Meets The Test

It was against this kind of a background that Oklahoma City was to hold meetings to talk about the possible solution of the problems of the black minority. Since the meeting was going to be in a predominantly white area, a meeting of the black community was held earlier in the evening to discuss the possible problems of the black community. The meeting was to be held in a predominantly black area, and it was to be attended by the black community to discuss the possible problems of the black community.
