MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Vice President Sarah Kay Agnew, managing her husband's communications, on Thursday night at a news conference, said her husband will not be running for re-election.

"The time has come to retire," she said, citing the pressure of her job and personal reasons.

"I am blessed with a wonderful family and many friends," she said. "But the time has come to retire and focus on my family and my health."

"I love this country and I love our military," she added. "But I have decided it is time to retire and focus on my family and my health."

"I want to thank all of my colleagues, both military and civilian, who have worked so hard on this campaign," she said. "I am grateful for your service and your sacrifice."

"I want to thank the American people," she added. "You have supported me throughout this campaign, and I am grateful for your support."

"I am proud of what we have accomplished," she said. "We have made real progress on the issues that matter to our country."

"I wish my husband well," she added. "He is a great leader, and I have no doubt that he will continue to lead our country in the right direction."
