Panther Raid Spurs Doubts

By WILLIAM GILMAN and J. D. WHITAKER

BOSTON (AP) — A Boston police raid on a Panther headquarters in Boston was a major blow to the Black Panthers' reputation in the city, police and Panthers said Sunday.

Police said 11 Panthers were arrested in the raid, which took place late Saturday night.

The raid was prompted by information received from an informant who had been living with the Panthers for several weeks.

The raid came as the Panthers were gearing up for a major demonstration against police brutality in Boston.

Police said they found several guns, including a .38-caliber revolver, in the Panthers' office.

Hard-Earned War Lessons

In the opinion of Gen. William C. Westmoreland, former U.S. commander in Vietnam, the United States wasted its military efforts in Vietnam.

While some of his critics have accused him of losing the war, Westmoreland contends that the American forces were too young and inexperienced.

"The military men who served in Vietnam," he said, "were not ready for the kind of conflict that we faced. They were not trained properly or given adequate support."
