Noise Booms To Rock — Called Hazard

A study by the U.S. National Bureau of Standards has found that loud noise, especially from rock music, can cause serious hearing loss in young people. The study, which was conducted over a period of several months, involved monitoring the hearing levels of 100 young people who attended rock concerts regularly. The results showed that the average hearing loss among these individuals was 20 decibels, which is equivalent to being deaf in one ear.

New Flap On Boats Brewing

A new debate has been heating up over the use of loud music on boats. The issue has been fueled by a recent study that found that noise levels on some boats can reach 100 decibels, which is considered to be dangerously loud. The study also found that长期 exposure to such noise can cause hearing loss.

The Great American Nail Church Shut

The Oklahoma Journal, Oklahoma City, Dec. 30

The Oklahoma Nail Church, a popular place of worship for young people, has been shut down due to a new law that prohibits the use of loud music in churches. The church had been known for its high-energy worship services, which often featured live music and dancing.

Mandatory Kindergarten?

The dangers of a lack of education in the early years of a child's life are well known. The United Nations, in its 1948 Declaration of Human Rights, recognized the right to education as a fundamental human right. Yet, despite this recognition, many children in the United States are not afforded the opportunity to receive a quality education. The lack of mandatory kindergartens in many states is a serious issue that needs to be addressed.

The PEOPLE'S Voice

Education

The inability to make a living and provide for one's family is a major concern in today's world. The lack of education and training for many people makes it difficult to find work and support their families. The people who are most affected by this are the working poor, who often have to take low-paying jobs to make ends meet.
