Pension Reform Hits Flak

President Reagan’s proposed pension reform bill has run into stiff resistance and may yet be rejected by Congress.

New York Senator Jacob K. Javits, ranking Republican on the Labor Committee, indicated the President’s proposal would have to be changed.

In his own party, Senator Charles Mathias of Maryland, chairman of the committee, said it was not yet time to announce a position on the bill.

The House Ways and Means Committee was considering a pension reform bill which would offer no pension benefits to the middle income worker.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Ignore Congress, Laird Tells Allies

"Cord, in secret talks, tells NATO: 'Ignore Congress, get on with the job.'" These words, attributed to Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger, have brought a storm of protest from Washington.

Washington - is a most unusual country. It has a tradition of independence for the President, but it has an even more powerful tradition of independence for Congress.

But the President and his allies are determined to press on. They are determined to pass a law that would do away with the present system of pensions.

The President’s proposal calls for a system of defined benefit plans, with equal benefits for all workers regardless of age, sex, or marital status.

Does More Than Help Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Infection

Japanese Foreign Minister, Akira Kobayashi, stung by criticism from the United States and China, the past week, has been attacking the United States and China for their foreign policy.

He said: "Japan is not a country to be treated like a little child. It is not a country to be told what to do. It is a country that has to be respected and treated with dignity."

Kobayashi, who visited the United States last week, was shot at by a man at the airport, and was survived by his wife and two children.

"He was a good man," said a friend. "He was a man of great courage."

Kobayashi was an influential member of the United States Congress, and was a strong supporter of the American military.

"He was a man of great integrity," said a friend. "He was a man who never compromised his principles."
