Ali Planning Exhibition Fights In City

By HOWARD ENGLISH

The issue of civil rights in this city is growing more intense as the exhibit of the American Civil Liberties Union on civil rights, which will open Monday, has drawn more than 2,000 persons to its opening.

President John F. Kennedy, who has been a strong supporter of civil rights, was scheduled to attend the opening of the exhibit, which will include a multimedia exhibit, a film, and a panel discussion on the issues.

The exhibit will run from Monday until Sunday.

Several hours after state and city officials had met with the NAACP to discuss civil rights issues, the Oklahoma City Police Department issued a statement saying that there would be a "vigilant" presence in the area to ensure peaceful protest.

The NAACP said it would continue to monitor the situation and work with local officials to ensure that the gathering remained peaceful.

The event was held at the Center for Unity, which has a capacity of only 300 people. The crowd overflowed into the street.

Bill To Avoid Snag?

Adams, speaking out about legislation aimed at preventing a $15 billion federal deficit, expressed concern about the impact of such a measure on the economy. He said the legislation could trigger a recession and harm the nation's industries. Adams emphasized the importance of finding a balanced approach to deficit reduction that does not undermine economic growth. He argued that the current legislation is too aggressive and could lead to unexpected consequences. Adams called for a more careful consideration of the potential effects of such policies on the country's financial stability. He warned that any actions taken should be guided by the principles of fiscal responsibility and economic sustainability. Adams concluded by expressing his support for a comprehensive approach that addresses the underlying causes of the deficit while maintaining a commitment to economic prosperity.
