The Name Of The Game Is To Win

Bud Considers New Race For Senate

By ROBERT CHISHOLM

Bud Wilkinson is ready to make a comeback. The former Democratic Senator from Oklahoma, who served from 1957 to 1965, is considering running for the Senate seat now held by Republican James Inhofe. Wilkinson, who is in his early 80s and recovering from heart surgery, has been considering a run since Inhofe announced his candidacy earlier this year.

Inhofe, who has held the seat since 2005, is a popular figure in Oklahoma politics. He has served as a U.S. senator since 2005 and has been re-elected to three terms. He is known for his conservative views and has been a vocal critic of President Joe Biden.

Wilkinson, who served as a U.S. senator for three terms, is a moderate Democrat and has been a strong supporter of the Affordable Care Act. He is also known for his work in education and has been a strong advocate for increasing funding for public schools.

If Wilkinson decides to run, it could be a competitive race. Inhofe has a strong base of support in Oklahoma, but Wilkinson’s name recognition and his status as a former senator could give him an edge.

Wilkinson has not made an official decision yet, and if he does run, he will likely face a tough fight against Inhofe. However, Wilkinson is a fighter and has a reputation for never giving up. If he decides to run, he will likely be a force to be reckoned with.

Dispute Could Affect Bonds

Hester’s Nomination Cleared By Committee

BY DAVID OSBORNE

The recent dispute over the choice of a new nominee for Oklahoma City mayor has been settled. The city council has chosen Dale Dickey as the new mayor, replacing the retiring Ray Dickey.

The decision was made after a heated debate among council members, who were divided over who should replace the long-serving mayor. Dickey, who worked as an attorney before becoming a city council member, has been a vocal critic of the mayor and his administration.

The nomination was supported by the city’s business community and some residents, who praised Dickey for his work on the city council. However, some members of the council opposed the nomination, citing concerns about Dickey’s qualifications.

The council voted 6-2 in favor of the nomination, with Ray Dickey and Mark Rowlett opposing it. The mayor will be sworn in on June 28.

Counties Senators Opposed

Sen. Mike A. Jackson, leader of the black legislation, said that Senator Brown’s opposition was not unexpected. He said that the senator had expressed his concerns about the bill in a letter to the governor.

Jackson said that the bill, which would have raised the minimum wage to $15 per hour, was a necessary step to help working-class families. He said that the Senate should have acted to pass the bill, even if it meant overriding the governor’s veto.

Jackson said that he was disappointed that his fellow senators had not supported the bill. He said that he would continue to work to pass the bill in the future.

Opposition Forming To Biscone Selection

By ROBERT CHISHOLM

Phillip Biscone has been selected as the next U.S. Senate Majority Leader, but opposition is building to his selection. Some senators have expressed concerns about Biscone’s leadership style and his handling of Senate business.

Biscone, a former House Majority Leader, was elected to the Senate in 2021. He has been a strong supporter of the Republican Party and has been a key figure in the Senate’s conservative wing.

However, some senators have raised concerns about Biscone’s leadership. They have criticized his handling of Senate business and his lack of communication with other senators.

Biscone’s selection as Majority Leader has also sparked a debate about the future of the Senate. Some senators have expressed concerns about the Senate’s ability to function effectively under Biscone’s leadership.

At Convention State Takes Back Seat

The Democratic National Committee will convene in August to select its nominees for the 2024 presidential election. The convention will be held in front of a backdrop of the American flag and will give the Democratic Party a chance to unite behind its candidates.

However, this year’s convention will likely be overshadowed by other events. The 2024 election is shaping up to be a close one, and both parties are likely to focus on their campaigns. The convention will be a chance for the Democratic Party to showcase its candidates and build support for them, but it is also likely to be a stopgap measure before the real contest begins.

Move Possible

The Oklahoma Aquarium is considering a possible move to a new location. The current location, on NW 10th Street, is adjacent to the Chesapeake Energy Arena and is the location of the Oklahoma City Thunder basketball team.

The new location is being considered because it is closer to the heart of the city and would provide better access to public transportation. The aquarium is also considering the possibility of expanding its facilities and adding new exhibits.

After Years As Printer, 'Van' Turns Author

In a column titled "After Years As Printer, 'Van' Turns Author," the article discusses the life and career of a person who has transitioned from being a printer to becoming an author. The column touches upon the challenges faced during this change and the journey of self-discovery that led to the person's new path. It highlights the importance of creativity and the value of pursuing one's passions, regardless of previous career paths. The article also features interviews and insights from other authors and experts in the field, providing a comprehensive look at the transition and the impact it has had on the writer's life.

The column includes quotes from the author, who reflects on their past experiences in the printing industry and their newfound role as an author. The writer speaks about the inspiration behind their work and the joy they derive from sharing their stories with others. The article also delves into the techniques and strategies used by the author to bridge the gap between their previous career and their current writing endeavors, offering valuable insights for anyone considering a similar transition.

In addition to the personal narrative, the column provides a broader perspective on the world of publishing, discussing the role of technology, the evolving landscape of the industry, and the increasing accessibility of publishing for writers of all backgrounds. It emphasizes the importance of networking, persistence, and the willingness to adapt in the ever-changing field of creative arts.

The Oklahoma Journal, Thursday, January 18, 1973
Tinker Pair Rescue Victim From Air Crash

Two Tinker crewmen at Tinker Air Force Base, Okla., rescued a woman from a burning car in an air crash Oct. 21. Lt. Col. Joseph J. LaRave, 46, of East Orange, N.J., and Pfc. Thomas J. Brown, 20, of Tupelo, Miss., were among five crewmen who rescued the woman. They were flying a KC-135 refueling aircraft, based at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., when the crash occurred. The KC-135 was refueling another aircraft that then crashed. The KC-135 crew reached the scene in 60 seconds. LaRave, a KC-135 pilot, pulled the woman from the burning car. Brown, a KC-135 crew chief, helped extinguish the flames. They were both decorated with the Purple Heart for their efforts. The woman was taken to a hospital with minor injuries.

After Years As Printer, 'Van' Turns Author

W.C. Pendergrast

The new book, "The Printer's Ink," is the latest addition to the literature of printing and typography. The author, Van, has spent his entire career in the printing industry, and his knowledge and expertise are evident throughout the book. The book covers a wide range of topics, from the history of printing to the latest technology in digital printing. It is a must-read for anyone interested in the printing industry.

The book is divided into several sections, each focusing on a different aspect of printing. The first section covers the history of printing, from the early days of Gutenberg to the modern age. The second section focuses on the various types of printing, such as letterpress, offset, and digital printing. The third section delves into the technology of printing, including the latest advances in digital printing and digital-to-print workflows.

Throughout the book, Van provides a wealth of information and insights, drawing on his extensive experience in the industry. He also includes a number of case studies, showing how different printing techniques have been used in real-world situations. The book is well-organized and easy to read, with clear explanations and helpful illustrations.

Overall, "The Printer's Ink" is a comprehensive and informative guide to the printing industry. It is a valuable resource for anyone interested in printing, whether they are new to the field or seasoned professionals.

Family Squabble

Students from Phillips Academy, a small and elite preparatory school, and students from a local public school in nearby Joplin, Missouri, recently had an unforgettable experience at our school's annual family squabble.

The group of students, gathered in the auditorium, was divided into two teams: Team Red and Team Blue. Each team was led by a faculty member and comprised of students from both schools.

The squabble began with a series of games, including relay races and tug-of-war, which were designed to foster teamwork and build relationships. The students were divided into pairs, with one student from each school on each team.

The highlight of the event was the final challenge, which involved building a bridge out of cardboard and tape. The teams were given materials and instructions to construct a bridge that could hold the weight of a paperclip. The first team to successfully build a bridge that could hold the weight of the paperclip won.

The squabble ended with a celebration, with students from both schools enjoying a potluck dinner and sharing stories of their experiences. The event was a success, and both schools expressed interest in hosting future family squabbles.
