WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Medical Association has asked its members to consider a proposal from the AMA, saying it is concerned about the growing problem of doctors accepting bribes from pharmaceutical companies.

The AMA, which represents about 170,000 doctors in the United States, said in a statement that it is working on a new policy to address the issue.

The proposal calls for doctors to disclose any financial relationships they have with pharmaceutical companies and to disclose any payments they receive from those companies.

The AMA also said it will develop a new code of ethics that would prohibit doctors from accepting bribes.

The proposal is part of the AMA’s efforts to combat a growing problem in the medical community. In recent years, the number of doctors accepting bribes has increased, and the AMA has been working to address the issue.

The proposal is expected to be discussed at the AMA’s annual meeting in May.

The AMA has been working with the American Society of Internal Medicine and the American Osteopathic Association to develop the new code of ethics.

Oil Shortage Denied

By GUY A. COMOORE
Lima, Ohio

Although the country has been living off the last 10 years, the U.S. is running out of all oil and gas resources, according to a recent report by the Energy Information Administration (EIA). The report, titled "The Future of Oil and Gas," predicts that the country will reach peak production by 2035 and 2025 for oil and gas, respectively.

In the meantime, President Joe Biden has called for increased domestic production and the expansion of offshore drilling. The EIA report also highlights the need for increased efficiency and conservation efforts. The report forecasts that by 2050, the country's oil production will decrease by 50%, and gas production will decrease by 75%.

In the meantime, the Biden administration has implemented policies to increase the use of renewable energy sources, such as wind and solar power. The administration has also announced plans to invest in the development of new technologies, such as carbon capture and storage, to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

While the situation is严峻, the EIA report notes that efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions are already paying off. The country's carbon dioxide emissions have fallen by 15% since 2019, primarily due to a decline in energy consumption and an increase in renewable energy generation.

In the meantime, the report calls for continued investment in clean energy technologies and policies to ensure a smooth transition to a low-carbon economy.

Travel Gain Expected

BY JACOB HALL

The FAA has announced plans to expand its travel ban on international flights, which could have a significant impact on the travel industry. The ban has been in place since March 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic, but the agency has stated that it will be lifted by the end of the year if the situation improves.

The travel ban has had a significant impact on the travel industry, with many airlines reporting losses of up to 90% of their revenue. The FAA has stated that it will be lifting the ban on flights to countries with high levels of COVID-19 transmission, including Brazil, India, and South Africa.

The FAA has also announced plans to expand its travel ban to include flights from other countries with high levels of COVID-19 transmission. The agency has stated that it will be working with partner countries to ensure a safe and efficient travel experience.
