Panel Calls For Zero Growth Choice

WASHINGTON: The National Population Commission and September that if America has a "red button" they would like to push to stop the growth of its population, it would probably be used on the "red button" to do so.

The commission said that the nation's growth is becoming increasingly more complex and that the country needs a comprehensive approach to address it. They recommended that the government should adopt policies that would slow down the rate of growth and encourage sustainable development.

The commission called for policies that would address the issues of poverty, inequality, education, and health care. They recommended that the government should invest in education and health care to reduce the rate of population growth.

"It is not enough to just reduce the rate of growth," said the commission in its report. "We need to address the underlying causes of population growth and ensure that our policies are sustainable for the long term."
State Plans To Ship Water West

by, merrill borne

Valuable through occasional it's fairly clear, scarce, and there are more. The plan seeks to maximize the use of water that is available for the public's benefit. The idea is to transport water from the west to help meet the needs of those in dry areas. The proposal has faced some opposition, with concerns about the environmental impact and the cost of the project. However, supporters argue that it is a necessary step to ensure water security for future generations.

FHA Director Praises Modular Homes Plant

By KEMP YODER

The FHA director praised the new modular homes plant in Oklahoma City. The plant, which is located on the outskirts of the city, is expected to create hundreds of jobs and bring millions of dollars to the local economy. FHA Director John A. Smith said the plant is a testament to the agency's commitment to providing affordable housing for Americans. "This is a great day for Oklahoma City," Smith said. "The FHA is proud to be a part of this project and we believe it will have a positive impact on the community." Smith said the plant will produce modular homes that can be delivered to customers in just a few weeks. The homes are made with high-quality materials and are designed to meet the latest energy efficiency standards. The FHA has been working closely with the developers to ensure that the homes meet the agency's requirements. "We're excited to see this project come to fruition," Smith said. "The FHA is committed to providing affordable housing for all Americans, and we believe modular homes are an important part of that mission." The plant is expected to be operational by the end of the year, and it is hoped that it will be a model for other modular homes plants across the country. "We're looking forward to seeing this plant in action," Smith said. "It's a great opportunity for Oklahoma City and for the FHA. We're proud to be a part of it."
Our POWs Could Use Amnesty

The question of whether our POWs' interests will be protected by the amnesty for Vietnam prisoners has been raised. The number of POWs held in North Vietnam is an open secret, and the government has been quick to denounce any such proposal. However, the amnesty is necessary for the release of our POWs.

In the event that a prisoner is not released, the government has the responsibility to negotiate for their release. The amnesty is a gesture of goodwill and a way to show our commitment to the release of our POWs.

It is important that the government take action to secure the release of our POWs. The amnesty is not a substitute for negotiations, but it is a step towards a solution.

Tom Broden

Goodbye, Poverty Agency

The demise of the poverty agency is a sad commentary on the state of our society. The agency was created to address the problems of poverty, but it has failed to do so. The agency has been undermined by the very people it was created to help.

It is time for a new approach to poverty. The agency's failure has shown that the current approach is not working. A new approach needs to be developed.

Bob Gormideon

Anybody Win?

The outcome of the Vietnam War is a matter of debate. Some say that there were winners, while others say that there were no winners. The truth is that the war was a tragedy for all.

The winners of the war are those who benefited from it. The losers are those who suffered from it. The war was a failure for both sides.

Paul Harvey

A Look At Marijuana

The debate over marijuana is ongoing. Some say that marijuana should be legalized, while others say that it should be made illegal. The truth is that marijuana is a complex issue.

It is important to understand the effects of marijuana on the body. The debate over marijuana should be based on science, not emotion.

Douglas from the audience, I'd like to introduce our new Co-Chairman for this year's annual city-wide "Art in the Park" event, Mr. John Smith. John is a well-known artist and has been a key figure in the local arts community for many years. He brings a wealth of experience and a passion for art to our organization.

Speaking of art, the current exhibit at the city hall is "Nature's Beauty," a collection of paintings by various local artists. It's a must-see if you're interested in art.

That's all from me. I hope you enjoy the event and that you will support our efforts to promote the arts in our community.

Mexican Next Symphony Guest

Harvey de la Fuente, director of the Orquesta Sinfónica de Nayarit, will be in the city next week as part of the symphony season. He will conduct the orchestra in a selection of Mexican and Latin American classics.

Along with regular concerts and events, the Symphony plans to introduce more Latin American music to the audience. This is a significant step in acknowledging the cultural diversity of our city.

Art-Craftsman

John and Mary Smith, owners of "Art and Gifts," are excited to announce the opening of their new shop. Located in the heart of the city, "Art and Gifts" offers a wide variety of art, gifts, and unique home decor items.

The shop features works by local artists, as well as items from around the world. Visitors can browse through the shop and enjoy the artwork while shopping.

Arthur Godfrey To End Long Career

BY RICHARD FELDSTEIN

Arthur Godfrey, the genial radio personality who entertained millions through his music and comic routines, is planning to end his long career of entertaining a nation. The decision was made last week when he announced that he would be leaving radio and television to devote his time to other projects.

Godfrey, who has been a fixture on the airwaves for more than 20 years, said he was not forced into retirement. "I'm leaving because I want to pursue other interests," he said in an interview. "I think it's time for me to do something different."

Godfrey, who was born in New York City, began his career in radio in the 1930s. He became famous for his comic routines and his ability to make people laugh. He was a regular on the Today Show for several years and has appeared on countless television shows.

"I've been blessed with a lot of success," Godfrey said. "I've had a wonderful career. But I think it's time for me to do something different."

Godfrey said he plans to travel the world and work on various projects. He has long been known for his love of art and architecture and has spent much of his career collecting and exhibiting works of art.

"I love art," Godfrey said. "I've been collecting for years. I want to continue to do that."

Godfrey said he is not sure what he will do next. "I'm not sure," he said. "I'm just going to take things as they come."

Godfrey's decision was met with mixed reactions. Some fans were sad to see him go, while others were excited about his future projects.

"We're going to miss him," said one fan. "He's been a part of our lives for so long."

"I'm happy for him," said another. "I think it's time for him to do something different."

Godfrey is expected to continue to make public appearances and will continue to lend his voice to various projects.

"I'll still be out there," he said. "I just won't be on the airwaves."

Godfrey said he was grateful for the support of his fans over the years. "I want to thank everyone who has supported me," he said. "I've had a wonderful career and I'm grateful for it."

"I've been lucky," he said. "I'm grateful for the opportunities I've had."

Godfrey is expected to announce more details about his future projects in the coming months.

The third annual New York Film Festival opened on Tuesday night with the screening of the film "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." The festival, which is sponsored by the Museum of Modern Art, runs through the weekend and features a variety of films from around the world.

"I'm thrilled," said festival director Florence Kennedy. "We've got a great program this year."

The festival features a wide range of films, including classic films, documentaries, and independent films. The films are shown in a variety of venues throughout the city, including a series of outdoor screenings in Central Park.

"It's wonderful," said festival patron John Smith. "I love the outdoor screenings. They're such a unique experience."

The festival is expected to attract thousands of film lovers from around the world. The opening night screening of "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" was packed with people, and the outdoor screenings were also well attended.

"I think it's a great event," said festival patron Jane Jones. "I've been coming for years. It's always a highlight of the year."

The festival concludes on Sunday with a special screening of the film "The Incredible Shrinking Man." The film is directed by Alfred Hitchcock and features special effects by Ray Harryhausen.

"I can't wait," said festival patron Robert Brown. "I've been looking forward to this for weeks."

The festival is expected to attract thousands of film lovers from around the world. The opening night screening of "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" was packed with people, and the outdoor screenings were also well attended.
Tulsa Ballerina Works As Bunny To Finance Master Study In Dance

Tulsa Ballerina Shirley Denney is working as a Bunny Girl to finance her trip to London and the Royal Ballet School. The 18-year-old student, who is a member of the Oklahoma City Ballet Company, will be studying under the famous choreographer, Sir Fredrick Ashton. This is the first time a Tulsa dancer has been accepted into the prestigious school.

Shirley was chosen by the school from a nationwide competition of young dancers. Her teacher, Mrs. Mary Brown, said Shirley has the talent and dedication to succeed in the demanding program.

"Shirley is very hardworking and has a natural talent for dance," Mrs. Brown said. "She has been studying ballet since she was six years old and has won several competitions. I am confident that she will excel in London and return home with valuable experience that will benefit her career.

Shirley's family has been very supportive of her dream to study in London. Her mother, Mrs. Robert Denney, said the family has been saving money for years to make this opportunity possible.

"We are proud of Shirley and are very excited for her," Mrs. Denney said. "She has worked very hard and has earned this chance to study with some of the world's best dancers. We will do everything we can to support her and make this dream a reality.

Shirley's departure will be bittersweet for her family. Her younger sister, Sue, said she will miss her sister but is happy for her.

"I'm going to miss Shirley a lot," Sue said. "She is my best friend and I will treasure the memories we have made together. But I am excited for her and I know she will make the most of this opportunity.

Shirley's journey to London will be challenging but she is prepared for the rigors of the ballet school. Her aunt, Mrs. Mary Brown, said she has been preparing Shirley for this opportunity for years.

"I have been preparing Shirley for this for a long time," Mrs. Brown said. "I have been teaching her and encouraging her to pursue her dreams. I am confident that she will do well in London and I am proud of her.

Ben Johnson Had To Be Talked Into Taking Role In 'Picture'

By WAYNE RAINA

APRONED only to the truth, Ben Johnson, one of the world's greatest athletes and most controversial actors, proved his credentials once again on the silver screen. In a rare interview with the Daily Star, Johnson revealed that he had to be talked into taking the role of a lifetime in the upcoming movie 'Picture'.

"It was the biggest offer I've ever had," Johnson told the Daily Star. "They even offered me a Porsche for life! But I didn't want to do it. I was thinking about my legacy and how I didn't want to go down in history as the guy who played a supporting role in a B-movie."

The movie, which Johnson described as "a real hard sell," was a biopic about the life of a legendary athlete. Johnson was hesitant to take the role because he didn't want to be typecast as an athlete on screen.

"I wanted to do something new," Johnson said. "I wanted to show the world that I could do more than run really, really fast."

Despite his reservations, Johnson eventually agreed to the role after a series of heated discussions with the film's director. The director convinced Johnson that he could handle the role with ease, and Johnson was finally convinced to take the part.

"It was tough," Johnson said. "But I knew I had to do it. I had to prove that I could act and show the world that I'm more than just a runner."

Johnson's performance in 'Picture' was met with mixed reviews. Some critics praised him for his sheer athletic brilliance on screen, while others were critical of his acting skills. But Johnson was happy with the outcome and has already started working on his next project.

"I'm already thinking about what I should do next," Johnson said. "I want to do something that will challenge me and push me to the limit."

Ben Johnson, after years of deals with sponsors and endor- sers, has finally found his true calling. He now spends his days running marathons and giving motivational speeches, and his legacy lives on through his performances on screen.

Shirley's Come A Long Way From Tomboy Days

Shirley Denney is a name that has been associated with Oklahoma for decades. From her days as a tomboy to her current status as a ballerina, Shirley has always been a force to be reckoned with.

Shirley was born in Oklahoma City in 1930. Her father was a coal miner and her mother was a homemaker. Shirley was the oldest of four children and was always the one to take charge.

"I was always the one who had to take care of things," Shirley said. "My brothers and sisters were always in trouble and I had to keep them out of it."

Shirley's tomboyish ways continued into her teenage years. She was a member of the school's track team and was known for her speed.

"I was always the fastest in my class," Shirley said. "I used to run at recess and everyone would chase me."

Shirley's goals were always big. She wanted to be a professional dancer and would spend hours practicing after school.

"I knew I wanted to be a dancer," Shirley said. "I would practice until my knees bled."
Public TV's Under White House Eye

BY THOMAS O`CONNOR

As the first year of the Carter administration wears on, the struggle for control over public television is heating up. The White House is said to be considering a proposal to give the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) a larger role in the management of the network, which would give the government more control over its programming.

The issue is complex and has been the subject of heated debate in Congress. The CPB, a non-profit organization, is currently responsible for overseeing the network's programming. However, some members of Congress have advocated giving the government more control over the network to ensure that it serves the national interest.

The White House is reportedly considering a proposal to give the CPB more authority over the network's programming. This would allow the government to have a greater say in what is broadcast on public television.

The proposal has sparked a debate among members of Congress. Some have praised the idea, saying that it would allow the government to ensure that public television serves the national interest. Others have expressed concern that giving the government too much control over the network could stifle creativity and limit the network's ability to provide programming that is valuable to viewers.

The debate is likely to continue as Congress debates the budget for the CPB and the future of public television. The issue is likely to be a topic of discussion in the upcoming congressional hearings on the network's operations.

Dizzy Gillespie Proud Of His Contributions

By Thomas O'Connor

Dizzy Gillespie was an American jazz musician, composer, and flugelhorn player who is widely considered to be one of the most important and influential figures in the history of jazz. He was known for his innovative and virtuosic style, and his use of bebop and Latin rhythms in his compositions.

Gillespie was born in 1917 and began his career in the 1940s as a member of Charlie Parker's band. He went on to record numerous albums as a leader and as a member of other groups, including the Duke Ellington Orchestra.

Gillespie is perhaps best known for his work with the Dizzy Gillespie Big Band, which he formed in 1947. The band was successful for many years and was influential in the development of jazz music.

Gillespie was inducted into the Jazz Hall of Fame in 1996 and received numerous other honors and awards throughout his career. He died in 1993, leaving behind a legacy that continues to inspire and influence jazz musicians around the world.

How to cook frozen meats, fish, poultry without thawing
...and get every ounce of the juices and flavor

The Basic Idea (Berry...it's beautiful!)
Once you discover this new technique (we call it Freezer-to-Table Cooking) you'll never use your oven, griller or skillet again. And everything you cook will be more tender and flavorful, because you won't be forcing the juices out.

How to Pack the Wrap
1. Place the meat, fish or poultry on a baking sheet or in a roasting pan. Add any desired seasonings and dressings. Make sure the meat is tightly wrapped to prevent leakage.
2. Place the wrapped meat, fish or poultry on the middle rack of the oven. Bake at 400°F (200°C) for the recommended time.
3. Remove from the oven and let it cool completely before wrapping in Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap.

Freezer-to-Table Fish
To Freeze: Wrap fish, poultry or meat in Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap. Place in airtight freezer bags. Store in freezer for up to 3 months.

Tension was mounting, and so was my work. Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson was to make a campaign swing through our area, and it was my job to coordinate time, place and appearance with Johnson's team for an outdoor rally.

Mr. Johnson's advance man and I had chosen the front of City Hall for 5 p.m. for the meeting, hoping for a large after-work crowd. It wasn't the best site in the world, but it was the best in San Jose, and we settled for it.

With the arrangements made, we headed for the airport to meet Mr. Johnson. The plane was late, and at 5 o'clock in front of City Hall we set up. By the time we did arrive, the crowd had numbered 1,000 at 5 p.m. and dwindled to about 50. The speaker's platform was opened full of crisp, clear air. A band was there, but the place was practically empty.

Clearly disappointed, Mr. Johnson stood out in the upstage audience.

"No. I'm not with a public school..." was the next line you're expecting a couple of days in the air. Why don't you just hold the meeting in a photo booth?"

Pet Corner

An Introduction to Turkeys

Turkeys make relatively care-free pets—and they're more entertaining than you might imagine. If your child creeps with a turkey, consider providing a hutch in which it can live. A hutch can be easily constructed with a glass aquarium. Build up the sides of cardboard and sell the pieces of water. A turkey should be kept in a temperature between 20 to 25 degrees. It should be kept to 40 degrees and the pen paper by a few feet. Keep to the same time of day, but vary it slightly. (Another approach: Turkeys, when small, not need any special care with certain hutch. They will walk a piece of Skye rock to fall on, and they should be put in a separate area of some place once a day for a shower.)

Feeding: To avoid submersion, the powder used in the hutch should be smooth so that it doesn't become sticky. Every time the "cagey" gets a turkey.
