By JOHN KING

BURLINGTON - Five persons were killed and five others seriously injured when a tornado swept west of here shortly after 9 p.m. Tuesday night.

At least 12 other homes and several commercial places were damaged.

Fifteen persons were killed when a tornado passed west and east of Burlington.

The tornado struck on the north end of the city and moved through the center of town, causing widespread destruction.

The tornado was rated as a strong EF3 on the Enhanced Fujita Scale, according to the National Weather Service.

The tornado caused significant damage to buildings and homes, as well as to power lines and trees.

Flooding was also reported, with several areas experiencing flash flooding.

The tornado was preceded by strong winds and heavy rain, which made it difficult for people to react quickly.

Eyewitnesses reported seeing the tornado as a large, dark funnel cloud that rapidly grew in size.

The tornado struck a neighborhood near downtown Burlington, causing significant damage to homes and businesses.

Several people were reported trapped under debris, and rescue efforts were underway to extricate them.

In total, the tornado caused over $100 million in damage and left a trail of destruction.

The tornado was the fourth major tornado to hit the area in less than a year, highlighting the need for improved tornado preparedness and emergency planning.

The National Weather Service is continuing to investigate the tornado and will issue a detailed report in the coming weeks.

In the meantime, residents are encouraged to remain vigilant and prepared for potential tornadoes.

Tree Roots Gobble Share Of Fertilizer

A common misconception among gardeners is that tree roots are greedy and will suck up all the available nutrients in the soil. This is not the case. While it is true that trees do require a significant amount of nutrition to support their growth, they do not consume all the available nutrients. The soil around trees is often rich in nutrients due to the organic matter that falls from the tree leaves, flowers, and fruit.

Elm Beetle Can Strip Trees In Short Time

The elm beetle is a major pest in the United States and other parts of the world. It is a small, brown beetle that feeds on the inner bark of elm trees, causing the bark to split and expose the tree's inner tissues. This can lead to the death of the tree if not treated properly.

Tree Roots Gobble Share Of Fertilizer

In some circumstances, tree roots can absorb as much as 30 percent of the nutrients in fertilizers. This means that some of the money you spend on fertilizers may not be reaching the soil where it's most needed. To help combat this issue, it's important to plant trees that have shallow root systems, which will reduce the amount of fertilizer that is absorbed by the roots.

Elm Beetle Can Strip Trees In Short Time

Elm beetles are known for their voracious appetite for elm trees. They can strip an entire tree of its leaves in a matter of days, leaving it vulnerable to disease and death. To prevent this, it's important to keep an eye out for elm beetles and take action if you notice any signs of infestation.

Elm Beetle Can Strip Trees in Short Time

By LUCY T. M., 1962

The elm beetle is the enemy of the trees in our neighborhood. They are eating away at the bark of the trees and making them die. We have been trying to control them by using a special insecticide, but it seems to be ineffective. The elm beetle is a small, brown insect that lives in the bark of the tree. They lay their eggs in the bark, and the larvae feed on the inner bark, causing the tree to weaken and eventually die. We need to find a more effective way to control these pests.

The bird program in our neighborhood is a great success. We have a variety of birds visiting our feeders, including robins, cardinals, and blue jays. The program is funded by the local Audubon Society. It is a great way to support local wildlife and educate the community about bird conservation. We encourage everyone to participate by providing food and water for the birds.

Booby Trap for Troubadours

By LUCY T. M., 1963

The Midwest City Flower Show is this week, and the entry deadline is today. I am sending in a booby trap for the troubadours category. The trap is made from a can of cat food, a nail, and a piece of string. When the troubadour puts their hand inside the can, they will trigger the nail, which will scratch their hand. This is a creative way to discourage the troubadours from entering the show.

Course To Cover Lawns

A great course for covering lawns is the one we have been using in our neighborhood. It is a five-step process that includes mowing, watering, aerating, scarifying, and overseeding. We recommend this course for anyone who wants to keep their lawn looking its best. It is easy to follow and provides good results.

Tree Roots Gobble Share Of Fertilizer

By LUCY T. M., 1962

Tree roots can consume a lot of the fertilizer that we put on our lawns. To combat this, we are using a special fertilizer that is designed to be absorbed by the roots. We also make sure to water the lawn regularly to help the fertilizer reach the roots. With these measures, we have seen a significant improvement in our lawn's health.

Good Deed Rewarded

In a recent situation, a man helped to clear a blockage in the storm drain, saving our property from flooding. We wanted to reward him for his selfless act, so we put out a reward for anyone who could provide information about the man. The reward was a $25 gift card, and we were able to find the man and give him the gift. We feel that this is a great way to encourage good deeds in our community.

There is a sparrow in the town of Perrywood. At 12 spring into a property with the same name, "Perrywood Acres," located near the framework. At its terminus, turns to feet onto the borders of the old area building, one sees a wolf and bears the name of the pond. Under the shrubbery, a remarkable species lives in a remarkable manner. They are a unique and interesting, the sparrow and the pond, the pond and the sparrow.

There are people who look beyond the surface, people who experience the world through their souls. Sometimes, it's the people who stand out in the crowd. They are the ones who see beyond the ordinary, who find beauty in the mundane.

On the night of April 14, 2017, at 11:09 p.m., a car crashed on the riverfront. The vehicle was carrying people who were returning from a concert. A body was recovered, and the cause of death is under investigation. The entire area was left in shock, and the community was united in support of the family.

At the scene, a doctor arrived, a doctor named Dr. Brooke. He examined the body and determined the cause of death. Dr. Brooke's knowledge and experience were crucial in the investigation. His work, along with the efforts of the police and other professionals, was essential in bringing closure to the family.
