U.S. Offers To Resume Paris Talks

WASHINGTON — The White House announced Tuesday night that U.S. Secretary of State Henry Cabot Lodge will go to London on Wednesday to meet with British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan to discuss the possibility of resuming the Paris talks. The announcement came a day after President Kennedy announced the U.S. would recognize Communist China in Tokyo.

Offensive To Support the Boy, it is known that the State Department is planning to re-examine the Paris settlement — which it regards as a "vital interest" of the U.S. — and to consider possible changes in the settlement. The statement was made in response to a question at a press conference by Secretary of State Hubert H. Humphrey.

The announcement was made at a time when the U.S. is facing a possible war in Vietnam and when the United States is trying to win the approval of the United Nations Security Council to take action against Communist China in the United Nations.

The President made his decision on the war after spending four hours at Camp David, Md., and after talking with his advisers. He was expected to make a decision later in the week on whether or not to send troops to Vietnam.

Shuttle Or Not To Shuttle

While the prospects in the House for the shuttle program are dim, the Senate is showing more interest. In hearings before the Senate Commerce Committee, NASA Administrator James Webb has praised the shuttle program and said it would be a great help in the search for life on other planets.

Congressman Jim Oberstar, a Minnesota Democrat, has introduced legislation that would authorize $17 billion for the shuttle program over the next 10 years. Oberstar said the shuttle is an important part of America's space program and should be continued.

The shuttle program has been under scrutiny for months. Critics argue that the shuttle is too expensive and risky, and that the money could be better spent on other space programs.

Webb said the shuttle is a key part of the nation's space exploration efforts and that it is essential for the United States to maintain a leadership role in space exploration.

Webb also said that the shuttle is important for the economy, providing jobs for workers in the aerospace industry.

The shuttle program has been plagued by problems, including two fatal accidents. The shuttle Challenger exploded during launch in January 1986, killing all seven crew members. The shuttle Columbia broke apart while returning from a mission in February 2003, killing all 15 crew members.

Despite the problems, Webb said the shuttle program is still an important part of the nation's space program and should be continued.

The shuttle program has been funded for more than 30 years, and its future is uncertain. Many members of Congress have expressed concerns about the cost and safety of the program, and the White House has proposed cutting funding for the shuttle in favor of other space programs.

Wilson Not Meat Price Culprit, Stockholders

In an effort to calm the recent fluctuations in meat prices, Robert Wilson, chairman of the board of directors for Wilson Meat Co., Inc., spoke to meeting of stockholders on April 7th. He explained that the company's policy is to minimize price increases and that he believes the market conditions have been responsible for the recent fluctuations. He also addressed the need for increased efficiency and cost controls in order to maintain competitive pricing.

Suit To Ask Open OU Meetings

A suit has been filed by a group of OU alumni, seeking the right to attend and participate in all campus meetings. The plaintiffs argue that the university's decision to restrict access to certain meetings violates their constitutional rights. The university, in response, maintains that the meetings are executive sessions and that they are necessary for the smooth functioning of the institution.

Pilots Key in Making More Money

It wasn't long ago that pilots were paid a couple dollars an hour just to deliver mail. But the industry has changed, and now pilots make significant sums of money. Today, a typical pilot can earn over $100,000 per year. The change has been driven by technology and increased demand for air travel. With more people traveling for both business and leisure, airlines are in need of qualified pilots. As a result, pilots have become more in-demand and their salaries have risen accordingly.
