Nixon, Brezhnev Hold 2-Hour Talk

MOSCOW (AP) — President Nixon talked privately with his Soviet counterpart, Leonid Brezhnev, for about two hours in Moscow’s Kremlin late Monday night, just before the opening of the United Nations General Assembly meeting. The meeting was held at the Kremlin, which is the official residence of the Soviet President.

American representatives during the Cold War II represented “the two titans that no one will ever forget.” The meeting, which began on Monday, was the first of its kind between the two countries.

The President, in a message to his Soviet counterpart that was read out by the Soviet Foreign Ministry, said: “I am confident that the United States and the Soviet Union can achieve a peaceful solution to the Vietnam War.”

In his speech, the President emphasized the importance of the meeting, which was held in Moscow, and expressed his hope that the talks might “offer a glimmer of hope” for the people of the world who are now in a state of fear and anxiety.

For more than an hour, President and Brezhnev discussed the possibility of a peaceful settlement to the Vietnam War and the need for a world order based on mutual respect for the rights of each other’s nations.

Additionally, the President and Brezhnev discussed the importance of maintaining stability in the world and the need for a strong international body to work towards a peaceful resolution of the Vietnam War.
