FUND SNAG LEAVES SYMPHONY OUT OF TUNE

WALTER M. HARRISON

The symphony's financial problems are not new, but the last-minute decision to fire its concertmaster has threatened to bring the organization to a halt.

The Oklahoma City Symphony Orchestra has been facing financial difficulties for some time, with a recent decision to fire its concertmaster adding to its struggles. The decision to cut costs has put the orchestra in a bind, and it remains to be seen how the organization will recover.

The Oklahoma City Symphony Orchestra is one of the largest and most respected symphony orchestras in the country. The orchestra has a long history of excellence, and its musicians are highly regarded. However, the recent decision to fire its concertmaster has raised questions about the orchestra's future.

The orchestra has been facing financial difficulties for some time, and the decision to fire its concertmaster has added to its struggles. The orchestra has announced that it will be forced to cut costs in order to remain viable, and it remains to be seen how the organization will recover.
